ENGINE BURSTS AT FULL SPEED; ENGINEER KILLED

Louis Koldenburg Fatally Hurt When Blown Out of Cab Window in Accident at Norwood to Fast Boston Freight

Fireman Saves Himself by Leaping to the Ground—Explosion of Injector Pipe Cause; Victim a Needham Resident

LOUIS KOLDENBURG, engineer on the fast freight over the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, due in Boston last night at 6.30, was blown out of the cab window and fatally injured by an explosion, as his train was whizzing over the rails at a rate of thirty-five miles an hour, just beyond Norwood station.

The accident was caused by the bursting of the injector pipe of the engine, which conducts the water from the tank to the boiler. J. J. Catlett, fireman in the engine cab, saved his life by jumping to the ground.

The freight train, bound for Boston from Hartford, was bowling along on the rails at a fast clip. Everything apparently was running smoothly from Hartford to Norwood.

Koldenburg was at the throttle, and he threw out the lever which compressed the steam and opened the injector.

Fireman Saved by Jumping.

Quick as a flash there was a thunderous detonation. There was a flash, steam soared out in white clouds, a shake and the long freight train came to a sudden stop. Fireman Catlett made a flying leap, striking the ground just a few feet from where the limp form of Koldenburg lay.

Catlett pulled himself together, staggered and, groping about, found the body of his companion. Help was summoned. The train hands and the police picked up Koldenburg's body. Several physicians responded to the Norwood police call and Koldenburg was rushed to Boston on the train from Franklin, due at the South station at 7.12. Koldenburg lapsed into unconsciousness and died when the passenger train reached Dorchester. The medical examiner was notified and he viewed the body at the South station.

Explosion Most Unusual.

The explosion is one of the most peculiar accidents that has ever happened on the New Haven road, according to the railroad men. One reason ascribed for it was that Koldenburg turned on too much steam and the injector pipe suffered an unusual strain.

Koldenburg was forty-five years old and was one of the most popular engineers on the road. He lived with his family in Needham and he had planned to go directly to his home when his train reached Boston.

Comet Sticking Close to Schedule; Not a Minute Late

Harvard Astronomers Have Only One More Question: Where is It's Tail?

Halley's comet is running on schedule time. It is sticking as closely to the Celestial Time Table as any passenger train of the best regulated railroads. For this fact the astronomers at Harvard University vouch.

Professor H. C. Wendell of Harvard, in speaking of this very phase, yesterday said: "On the morning of April 21 when I made my observation of the tail of the comet, it was a degree and a half long. From the earth, this distance would equal about three millions of miles, making the tail of the comet at the time about that length. Later the tail will be many times longer than that."

The comet is coming closer and closer to the earth. It is travelling at the rate of 2,500,000 miles a day. It will be closest to the earth on May 21 when it will be only 15,000,000 miles distant.

To-morrow, the comet will be visible to the naked eye at 2.58 o'clock when it reaches the eastern horizon if weather conditions are good.

MINE LEADER CRUCIFIED.

Horrible Torture and Death Inflicted on Man By His Employes.

WHEELING, W. Va., April 23.—The ghastly, if biblical times and tales of cruelty of the Middle Ages were eclipsed when George Rabbit, a mine official of the Pittsburg & Washington Coal Company, was dragged from his bed at Avella, Pa., a small mining town, and crucified by a drunken mob of miners, with the body bleeding from many wounds, in a dying condition, the man was cut down by Superintendent Hagen and a detail of police from Washington, Pa. Death came in a little while after the man was taken to a hospital. A crown of thorns was brought and placed upon his head. Pushing the thorns into the man's brow until the blood coursed down his nude body, a hole was dug and a rude cross was made. The mob hauled the man up on the cross and bound him, after which spikes were driven through his hands. The crowd then sang and danced about the body for more than two hours. Stones were hurled at the body, while cuts were made across his limbs with knives.

WOMAN LEADS RIDERS.

200-Mile Cross-Country Trip, With Mrs. Wadsworth at Head.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—Mrs. Herbert Wadsworth, who is a noted cross-country rider, and with her husband a member of the famous Genesee Valley Hunt, started to-day with a party of friends from Mount Vernon, Va., on a 200-mile horseback ride. Among those who had mounts were Miss Mary Carlisle, Lieut.-Com. Henry V. Butler, U. S. A., and Frederick Hubbekoper. The ride will be through Manassas, the plains, Little Washington, the Luray Caverns and to Stoney Mountains in the Blue Ridge range. The ride is an annual event.

Herbert Goodman, coachman for the Robinson family, was also injured in the explosion but will recover.

The Robinson estate on Greenfield Hill in Fairfield, is one of the finest along the sound. The house was opened early a few days ago, when the Robinson family came here from the West to spend the Summer.

LAWSON BETS $1,000 HE CAN MAKE MONEY BUYING DOGS

More Than That, the State Street Broker Wants One to Be His Chum.

A LITTLE DINNER WAGER

Master of Dreamwold Expects to Pocket $2,500 Profit from Canine Deals in Meantime.

THE more Thomas W. Lawson has seen of men the better he likes dogs, and so he has advertised for a pal bow-wow for a pal.

Behind the move of the master hand at advertisement is his confidence that with the proper use of printer's ink a man may not only win wealth but he may achieve almost anything else he goes after.

The optimistic State Street broker has made a wager that he will win his pal-building within thirty days. He bets that he will also have made $2,500 through the sale of buildings that he will buy during the month, and of which he will pay for his advertising, and he will have in his pocket another $1,000 which will be contributed by the men with whom he made the wager.

An After Dinner Idea.

The idea was born at a little dinner attended by Mr. Lawson and some advertising friends. There were nine men at the banquet. They had reached the black coffee point in the program when they began to talk advertising. Mr. Lawson said something like this:

"You can sell anything or buy anything or accomplish anything by proper advertising. I know what I'm talking about. I've done some advertising in my time.

"Now, I want a bull dog for a pal out on my farm. I'm going to advertise for the kind of a dog I want. In thirty days I'll have the dog. I'll also have $2,500 as the result of dogs that I'll get and sell. This will pay for all my advertising, for I'll advertise in the right way, and that takes money."

"Well, now, just to make it interesting," suggested Lawson, "I'll make it little bet to that effect. If I do it, will you gentlemen be willing to pay for another dinner and hand me $1,000 for my trouble if I promise to make a like return if I lose?"

Fastidious About the Dog.

"Sure thing!" came back in a chorus.

"You're on," quoth Lawson.

Then began Mr. Lawson's advertising stunt in search of the pal-bow-wow. His advertisements are Lawsonesque. He has laid down specifications for a dog that probably only existed in Mr. Lawson's imagination and heaven. It must not be a hot-weather dilletante, and its training must be such that it can trot "round and round the garden paths without upsetting a pansy or unnesting a tree toad."

That's the kind of a pal bull bow-wow Mr. Lawson wants. He says he knows that it is a rarity, but he knows that there is such a one somewhere.

"There is just such a one as I describe," he declares, "pulling with the stable boys, or with the farmer's daughter through the lane, or at the heels of the kennel man as a fare sort somewhere, and it is him that I am after."

Campaign Two Days Old.

The advertising campaign began only a couple of days ago, and already his secretary, his henwoman and all of the force on the big estate, Dreamwold, at Scituate, have been offered all kinds of dogs—bull, part bull and anti-bull, for prices varying with the nerve of the would-be seller.

Down in Mr. Lawson's State street office hangs a big red collar with the brass trimmings all shined up ready for the new comer. Facing this dog collar that hangs from an electric light fixture is a four foot oil painting of the English bulldogs now at Dreamwold, and they are almost life-like with a look of disgust at that hanging dog collar.

A dog has always been Mr. Lawson's sole companion about Dreamwold on his walks in the farm acres. Once a big white bull terrier that had roamed about the big mansion house, undisturbed by maid or butler, was killed last Summer.

Mr. Lawson's kennels are full of blooded dogs, from Russian wolfhounds down to the tiny whippets, but in all this assortment Mr. Lawson failed to pick out a real chum dog and has been looking for one ever since his pet was killed.

ENDLESS CHAIN OF PARASITES TO KILL GYPSY MOTHS

FIGHT FROM THE EGG UP

THE "sequence of parasites" is going to be the everlasting finish of the gypsy moth.

Likewise of the brown-tail moth. But as the gypsy moth is more injurious, it is to the gypsy that the major attention is being paid.

To paraphrase a popular saying, life for the gypsy moth will hereafter be simply "one darn parasite after another."

It's going to take about six years more to get this "sequence of parasites" working at top speed. A pamphlet just issued by State Forester Hane and Expert W. F. Fiske of the United States Department of Agriculture says.

"It will be 1916 before the complete control of the gypsy moth in New England can reasonably be expected, and unless the writer is mistaken, this control, when it is effected, will be general over all the infested area."

But it is "Parasites—1916" for Messrs. Hane and Fiske. By that time they figure that the gypsy moth will have gone down for the count.

Fight from the Egg Up.

This "sequence of parasites" is fully explained in long, yet-the words in the pamphlet. For common people, however, it may be said that the scheme is simply to keep a succession of bug enemies attacking the gypsy and brown-tail moths from the egg up.

If France and Germany were at ordinary war, for instance, they might fight evenly.

But, suppose Germany had one force of soldiers to attack all the French babies. Then suppose Germany sent a second army to fight all the French schoolboys who survived babyhood.

Well, suppose some French lads outlived all this and grew to fighting age. Then let Germany send a force of seasoned warriors.

What the "Sequence" Means.

Substitute for soldiers imported parasites which feed upon and destroy gypsy moths at different ages, and you have a "sequence of parasites."

No wonder it looks as though Messrs. Hane and Fiske were getting B'rer Moth by the short hairs.

To quote again from this entertaining bug pamphlet:

"There is one very important factor which must be taken into consideration and thoroughly understood before it will be possible intelligently to discuss the work which has been accomplished in the importation of parasites of the gypsy moth. Briefly stated, it is that no one parasite is capable of effecting the necessary amount of control in an insect of the character of the gypsy moth, and capable of a similarly rapid rate of increase when unchecked by parasites; but a sequence of parasites, which will attack the insect in different stages of its development, and all the component members of which will work together in harmony, is absolutely necessary before the best results may be expected.

"It has already been stated that the different parasites of one host are limited in their attack to certain stages in the development of the host. In the case of the gypsy moth, there are some which attack the egg, others the young caterpillars or the older and larger caterpillars, and those which form still another group reserve their attack until such time as the caterpillars have spun up preparatory to their transformation into pupae, or until after this transformation has taken place. It is confidently believed that representatives of each of these three or four groups will have to be established in America before any marked results of a practical nature can be expected."

Consider, also, the terrifying names in the roster of this bug army. When the

Mrs. Green, the richest and Her Daughter, Mrs. Wilkes.

Old Age Forces Richest Woman in the World to Cease Market Activities.

NEW YORK, April 23.—Mrs. Hetty Green, the richest woman in the world—who can produce more cash on short notice than any banker in Wall street—yesterday announced her retirement from active business. This wealthy woman who, for years has been her own financial manager, has turned the management of her great properties, estimated to be worth $50,000,000 over to her daughter, Sylvia, who recently became Mrs. Matthew Astor Wilkes.

Mrs. Green, the woman who, unaided, was able to make her way successfully and to cope with the shrewdest minds in Wall street, to-day admitted inertly by her retirement from business that age has conquered her. She is seventy-three and the god health which she here's for so many years has deserted her.

Was Regular at Office.

At one time the visits of Mrs. Green to her office, formerly in the Chemical National Bank, were as regular as the rising of the sun.

Recently she transferred her office to the National Park Bank building and for the last few weeks she has been often suspected to stay at home. When she did appear at her desk it was noticeable that she had become enfeebled. Mrs. Green's daughter has been her "right hand man" in the conduct of the former's business affairs. The mother has been training the daughter to take up the business management of the Green properties and now it is said the daughter is ready to assume the responsibilities of individual management.

Busy as she was all her life, Mrs. Green was a great reader and a great philosopher. She was a shrewd political economist and she has always had striking and original ideas and ways of expressing them. Here is one thing she said of American women:

"The women of America have helped to make hard times. All they live for, all they care for, is ribbons—the latest shape in hats, the newest tangled skirts. And they are none too particular how they get what they want or who pays for it.

Don't Care for Expense.

"Oh, I am not saying that American women are not moral, but I do say that they do not care what price their husbands and fathers and brothers pay for the finery and luxury they demand. More men are driven to dishonesty by the wife's hand of a woman, stuck all over with jewels, than by their love of horses, rich food and gay clothes.

Here is another idea in economics of Mrs. Green's: "The American child is not taught how to save money, but how to spend it. Everything they want—give it to them so long as you have the price or credit—that's the policy of the modern mother, and she is raising a nation of spendthrifts whose one thought is to get what they want when they want it. That is why men and women, the few who know how to save, will in time be masters of those who know only how to spend."

B. & M. TO INCREASE FARES 10 PER CENT

Advance in Wages to Employes to Be Paid by People; Suburban Rates Stay

Passenger rates on the Boston & Maine Railroad are to be raised about 10 per cent. The recent advance in wages given the employes of the railroad is to be made good to the treasury of the railroad company by increasing the fares. The new rates will likely go into effect June 1.

President Lucius Tuttle yesterday announced that the raise in fares is to take place as soon as possible. Under the law the railroad must publish its new rate with the Interstate Commerce Commission thirty days before the new tariff becomes effective.

A general reduction in fares was inaugurated in February, 1907. The cut was 10 per cent. This is about the increase which will now be made.

President Tuttle said that suburban rates are not to be affected. Passengers going from here to Bangor, Me., will have to pay fifty-seven cents more fare. Those who go to Portland will find it costs twenty-three cents more, to Fitchburg the increase will be ten cents; to Lowell six cents; and to Portsmouth, N. H., eleven cents. Here is how the new rates will probably reach New England points:

Station.	Fare.	New rate.	Increase
Bangor, Me.	$4.70	$5.27	$.57
Portland	.92	1.01	.09
Gardiner	.87	.97	.10

$1,500 Egyptian Beauty, Found on the Bowery.

NEW YORK, April 23.—The Egyptian goddess Neith, whose disappearance from the galleries of the Metropolitan Museum of Art so agitated the Museum authorities, turned up on the Bowery to-day. She had suffered the indignity of being "hocked" for fifty cents. The goddess' form was embodied in a statuette 2¾ inches tall, of great artistic value, and worth approximately $1,500 on a commercial basis. The statuette dates from about the Seventh Century B. C.

LOCKHART CONFESSES, ACCUSING KELIHER

Sworn Story by Coleman's Friend Link That Connected Faro Steerer With Looting of the Cambridge National Bank

Big Bill Jailed, Unable to Furnish $25,000 Bond—Secret Service Men Learned Evidence That Led to His Arrest

THE fact that William W. Lockhart had made a full confession of his connection with the looting of the Cambridge National City Bank by George W. Coleman and that it was this sworn story that furnished the link that connected "Big Bill" Kelliher with the crime was one of several important developments yesterday in the remarkable bank robbery.

This became known after "Big Bill" had been held by United States Commissioner Hayes in $25,000 bonds for aiding and abetting Coleman in the robbery of the bank. The size of the bond and the further fact that the Government decided that only cash in that amount or real estate unencumbered to the amount of $100,000 would be accepted gave an inkling of the importance with which they regard Kelliher in the case.

It also became known positively yesterday that Coleman is not married, as has been reported. He had in his pocket yesterday the marriage license which he secured.

Up to yesterday the public had been kept in darkness as to how the Secret Service officers from Washington, who had been working steadily on the case, had finally secured the evidence they desired before they took Kelliher into custody. Then it was learned that Lockhart's counsel and the Government had had a long conference, as a result of which Lockhart told all he knew.

Lockhart is indicted on the same charge that has been made against Kelliher—aiding and abetting Coleman in the bank robbery. On May 10, when Lockhart and Coleman are arraigned, both will plead guilty.

Being indicted, Lockhart was not obliged to tell anything he knew. It is known that Coleman has been anxious to save the young man in every way possible. His lawyer, after looking at the matter from all sides, felt that it would be better for his client to take this course.

Prosecution to the Limit.

Just how far he inculpated "Big Bill," the man who steered Coleman against the New York faro tricksters, is not known, but that the Government proposes to go after the big fellow to the limit was shown by the course of proceedings yesterday.

When the friends of "Big Bill" learned that Commissioner Hayes had fixed his bond at $25,000 there was a scurrying about to raise the ball. A number of men got together, worth from $10,000 to $20,000, and they succeeded in getting, as they thought, a bond that would be accepted. When United States District Attorney French was consulted about the matter the friends of the prisoner were amazed to find that he would not accept more than three men nor less than two on the bond.

"I would prefer a few big fellows on this bond," said French dryly, "rather than a lot of little fellows."

This staggered the backers of "Big Bill." They talked the matter over and finally they reached the conclusion that if they pooled their property and offered it to a bonding company that they could get the $25,000 bail in that way.

Won't Accept Surety Company.

Having reached this conclusion, the Government was again approached with a view to liberating "Big Bill."

"We will not accept a surety company," said French.

BANK LOOTER COLEMAN TELLS NOVELIST FUTRELLE HE WILL PLEAD GUILTY

By JACQUES FUTRELLE.

"GIVE me my sentence, and let's be done with it!"

This, in effect, is the plea of George W. Coleman, one of the youngest, and certainly one of the most gifted bank swindlers New England has ever produced. I saw him at his home, No. 128 Magazine street, Cambridge, yesterday, and talked with him for two hours or so. With the larger part of his life before him, he asks this.

Incidentally he expressed regret that depositors in the National City Bank of Cambridge, which he looted, would suffer loss through his own dishonesty.

"It's a damned shame!" he declared in disgust. And further: "I don't know how they got Big Bill Keliher even on the charge of aiding and abetting me, still further. "If any one of the directors of the bank is arrested, that all should be. One is no more responsible than the others."

To Reveal All in Court.

"The sooner sentence is pronounced the better we will like it," Coleman's mother declared. "We want it all over with. The sooner he goes, the sooner he will return."

So, Coleman will plead guilty to the looting of the National City Bank of Cambridge, and then, perhaps, then will come a story to rank with the greatest will ever be told in criminal history. That story will be his testimony against Keliher, who is the principal one held in connection with the looting of the bank—a charge that will be told frankly, without question, for the simple reason that when called to the witness stand, under sentence already, and beyond the reach of other charges unplanned, there will be nothing to conceal.

"I want to be sentenced first," he told me yesterday. "If I should wait until the other trials are concluded before my sentence came, I might get in wrong, or slightly say or do something as a witness in those other cases which would work to my disadvantage."

There is sum somewhere between two hundred thousand and three hundred thousand dollars involved. How much of it Coleman got does not yet appear, in fact it is doubtful if he knows precisely how much he did get of it.

Toyed With Experts.

When he wanted money he thrust a hand into the till of the bank where he was head-clerk at $12 a week and took it. It passed through his hands as water through a sieve. If a man asked for it he got it; if a woman asked for it she got it. It is said that certain experts employed by Coleman before bounty as "the gang" got a large part of it, and that they were paid generously with it in "brace" games.

He and Inst are still the time Coleman is a genius at large. He fabricated books for the bank, and it will be told of him that once, when he tired of the everlasting, he deliberately planned that a bank examiner should catch him by the heels in the books which were laid before the examiner.

"He was afraid," the examiner declared, according to the same report, and pointed out the errors for correction.

Big Bill Keliher Coleman didn't say much about him. What he did say came in answer to my questions as to the rumors current against Big Bill, which are to the effect that Coleman intimated that Big Bill was aroused on Friday.

Pursued by Fatal Friday.

"I'm superstitious about Friday," he said. "All the evil things of my life have come on Friday—everything that has ever happened to me. By the way, I was born on the 13th of the month, I think, and my case comes before the court just a day or so before that."

He is a strange man, this George W. Coleman. He is good looking, distinctly intellectual, with that perfect poise and frank appearance that invites confidence. He is a man one meets at the right table at other times the sagacious man of affairs; at other times the collector's bore adored by and adoring his mother. She was present at our interview yesterday, and listened, listened with a prayer to her face—a prayer for help, she knew. At times he boasted a little; she did not interrupt. At other times he talked of a particular subject as if he might go to jail, and always she did interrupt.

A Genius at Figures.

Through the half open door he came, George W. Coleman, one of the most remarkable—perhaps the most remarkable—bank looter of his day, a genius at figure, a wizard at deception, through the half open door he came into the drawing room of his cell of his mother. His coat was off, his feet were encased in loose dressing slippers, his waistcoat was unbuttoned, and his crisp light hair was wrinkled slightly. He was smoking a cigarette and smiling.

He is sturdy of figure—he weighs, according to his own statement, about hundred and seventy pounds—he is 5 feet, 10 inches tall, as clear of complexion as a school girl, with straight nose, full lips, frank gray eyes; and he is distinctly good-looking. I don't know that I have ever met a man who impressed me more favorably at first glance as did this young man. He is twenty-four years old.

I was introduced; he shook hands with me. It was not the flabby, formal hand-shake of a man who is afraid; it was the handshake of a man who, had circumstances or inclination so willed, might have been a leader in big affairs. He looked at me keenly, never known fear or indecision—a man who was glad to see one who welcomed me as one from the outside world, to whom he could talk of things in which he, at least, and I, perhaps, might be interested.

Curious About Federal Prison.

As it developed, there were many things in which we were mutually interested—automobiling, in particular, and, incidentally, the Federal Prison in Atlanta, Ga. Coleman expects to spend the next five, perhaps ten, years of his existence at the Federal Prison at Atlanta, and he was curious to know what it was like, how many prisoners he accommodated, and the number of prisoners now there. I went through the Federal Prison there a short while ago, and to the best of my ability I believed his curiosity.

There were other things we discussed in the couple of hours we were together—for instance, bad colds, and the late Mark Twain, and cleanliness, and Big Bill Keliher, and Henry James—and the weather, together with probabilities and possibilities in the great bank trials in which Coleman, as the central figure, will participate shortly, on the eve of his departure to some Federal prison, after he has pleaded guilty to the looting of the National City Bank of Cambridge. He will plead guilty to this when he remarked casually to me that he didn't expect to be in court more than two hours when he was called for trial.

Through all our conversation Coleman's mother, a severe faced, well-preserved woman of middle age with deep lines of suffering in her face, adorning in her well-stained eyes, and a smile upon her lips, was present. Occasionally—quite occasionally—she interrupted with a remark which, in itself, meant nothing but which was intended to check impetuous statements of her son. Always at the interruption, he would turn to her, and smile gently, reassuringly, and—change the subject.

He, Too, Was Held as Speeder.

It has been said of Coleman that he is as easily led as a child, that he has talked too much, that he has talked too little, that he was the tool of other people in the looting of the bank, that he was not the tool of other people, and a thousand other things. The mother, unflinchingly, was willing that this boy whom she adored should talk, but she was not willing that he should say that thing which might lengthen his term in prison, or further complicate the case.

My conversation with Coleman, like all conversation with anyone, began with the weather. I said it was muggy; he agreed with me. Knowing his fondness for automobiling I went on to say that I had intended to motor out, but had been discouraged by sloppy streets, and by indications of rain.

"And besides," I added, "I have just had the pleasure of being fined in Bingham for speeding. So I've had my share."

Coleman's grey eyes lighted up instantly. "How much?" he asked.

"Twenty dollars," I replied.

"Why, that's the same fine," he remarked. "I was going through there once—in fact, I made the run from Nantucket to Boston in forty-five minutes—and I was going sixty miles or better. I was caught by a policeman, and he charged me with everything—speeding, not signalling and manners, not showing up at crossing, and another.

Had Thrilling Auto Chase.

"He told me if I would plead guilty to either one of the charges he would drop the others, and asked me which, if I would plead guilty to. I told him I preferred the speeding charge. Then when I went into court I found that another charge had been added, and I didn't know it. I was fined $50."

He paused reminiscently and lighted a cigarette.

"Did you ever happen to know of the policeman who used to use the little steam car out on the Blue Hill road?" he asked. "I used the cigarette was burning. He chased me for weeks before he got me. He used to boast that he had me eighty miles or better. I had a sixty horsepower car, and I didn't know that he was after me. Finally someone told me he and I had a chase, and I decided to try for it. One night, after I heard that he dropped into a drug store where he used to stop and casually telephone ahead to the next station to get word that I didn't believe he could get me. Well, we had it. I pushed my machine along, after leading him out a distance, and he still later had a thrilling day for a time.

Train Blocks Flight.

No," and Coleman laughed. "He wanted to catch me in the act. He did catch me later. I outran him to East Milton, and I think pulled in, and the gates dropped, so I had to stop. He caught me that time."

He smoked thoughtfully.

Something was said about a Good Roads' Tour from New York to Atlanta, Georgia.

"Atlanta?" Coleman queried, and he looked at me expectantly.

"Atlanta, yes," I replied. "There's a Federal Prison there—a new one. Charles W. Morse, the ice-king, is there."

"What sort of prison is it?" Coleman queried.

"A new one, and a pretty one." I told him. "There's a large view from every window. There is one immense court for inmates, with large grounds, and is scrupulously neat throughout."

"How—how big is it?" Coleman asked, faltering.

"I think it will accommodate some twenty-five hundred," I replied. "I don't believe, though, at the moment, that there are more than sixteen or seventeen hundred prisoners there."

From that I went on to describe the soldier in Atlanta, and a little silence fell. Coleman lighted another cigarette, glanced at his mother and smiled.

"The arrest of Big Bill Keliher?" I asked, and this time I was faltering. "What is—what is the charge against him?"

Make Stockholders Settle.

Coleman turned to me flatly, with grave face.

"Aiding and abetting I suppose," he said. "I don't see how they got him, though, even on that."

Again a little silence.

"It is rumored that there are other arrests to come," I remarked. Coleman looked up quickly. "I mean that there may be an arrest of a director of the bank; the rumor is very strong."

"I don't see why they should arrest one without arresting all," Coleman replied shortly. "On what charges?"

"Malfeasance, perhaps."

"If they proceed against one why not proceed against all?" he demanded abruptly. "No one is more responsible than are the others."

"Some of the stockholders in the bank won't be able to meet their assessments," Coleman's mother remarked timidly. "That means that depositors will lose their money. Many of them were very poor, too."

"That's a damned shame!" exclaimed Coleman. And this from the man who will plead guilty to the charge of looting the bank. "Why should the depositors lose it? They are the stockholders in the bank, can afford to lose it. Some of them are rich. Should say that Mr. Brewer, the banker is worth a million and a half dollars. He could make it all up and not miss it."

Mother Moved to Tears.

The conversation drifted on for a time. Then:

"When do you come up for trial?" I ventured.

About the tenth of May," he answered promptly.

"How long do you anticipate it will last?"

"Why, a part of it won't last more than a couple of hours." If there had been any doubt as to Coleman's intention of pleading guilty to the charge of looting the bank, this remark dispelled it. "All after that I've got to stay here awhile. After the fuss I'll be down in Boston cellar jail for a while. It's a rotten hole, too."

"We want it all over as soon as possible," she said finally. "George may be in Charles street jail for a month or more, but it will be that much off his sentence, and every month will count, as it means that he will be free that much sooner."

Lockhart in His Employ.

And again there came a pause, one of those pauses which was due to his disinclination to speak without being questioned, and my disinclination to question him.

"Mrs. Lockhart?" I questioned. "What is the charge against him?"

"Aiding and abetting, I think," replied Coleman. "Lockhart worked in the bank until two years ago. He was there for me when I was away or when an assistant was sick. Later Lockhart was in my employ."

The statement is of peculiar interest in that it has been declared that the wife of Coleman extended over a period of years, four or five, as it now develops that Lockhart, later in the employ of Coleman, was in the employ of the bank at the same time Coleman was, and was under bonds to the bank. And then, again, the conversation drifted idly for a time.

It was late in the afternoon when this was learned and "Big Bill" was waiting hopefully in his cell in the Charles street jail. The situation was unusual. He was in with the cheerless information that he would have to remain in prison until Monday, at the least.

His friends declare that they will get "Big Bill" out to-morrow either by putting up the cash or by getting two or three persons who have $10,000 worth of property to bail him.

Keliher, although he tried to take the matter of arrest on Friday lightly, was apparently did not relish his night in prison—the first he had ever had to spend in a cell. So when they brought him to the Federal Building he was still there, a street jail and he caught sight of the force he was causing he smashed the camera with a on camera and exclaimed disgustedly:

"I should think that a circus had come to town!"

Mrs. Lawyer Ashley was called to make a statement in behalf of his client Keliher.

"As to the case I have nothing to say at this time," he said. "I will be ready to talk to all of us, for we had reason to believe that Keliher would be substantiated in a statement he made. He was still there, but not until no client has secured the bail bond I have nothing further to say."

Keliher's wife, who is a handsome brunette building from the jail in a closed carriage, was in company with Deputy Marshal Waters and Bailiff Tighe. It was a sympathetic group that surrounded her as she was rushed to one side of the building to avoid the crowd at the post, he observed:

"I Seem to Be a Curiosity."

"I seem to be a curiosity here."

The crowd flocked after him as he was taken into the building. He was taken into an elevator and hoisted to the third floor, where he stopped in the office of Marshal Murchie. There are three steel cages on this floor for prisoners. Keliher was placed in the last of this tier, the door was thrown open, he stepped in and the door was closed with a clang.

He walked all of his nerve at this moment, for he was pale, but he was a careful man, and he was not. He was in his cell, with his hands on the bars, and he was there for Keliher was removed to the Mill street side of the building, and the commissioner was arraigned. Mr. Keliher, Mrs. Keliher and Lawyer Ashley were present during the commissioner's hearing which lasted about an hour. When Keliher had been placed in position in the dock Commissioner Hayes asked:

"Is the bail $25,000?"

"Yes," was the cold in the answer, and for a short time Keliher was taken to the cell in which he was to spend the night. It was then he showed his anger

"BILL KELIHER IS NO FRIEND OF MINE," SAYS MISS LAURA ATWOOD

Miss Laura M. Atwood, who was reported to be engaged to marry Keliher, issued a statement yesterday in which she denied that she had any hand in his downfall. She declared that she had no friend of mine, and I wouldn't help him out with a cent."

Miss Atwood is a vivacious and attractive woman of about twenty-four years of age. She is a graduate of Simmons College and is living at the Belvedere, where she is a reporter last night.

Keliher does not interest me one way or another," she said. "I am not a friend of his or anything. I wouldn't help him into jail or out of it."

She added that she would rather discuss Hailey's escape than Keliher. Miss Atwood had as companion a young woman who strongly resembled Miss Hightower, who was said to be engaged to George W. Coleman and who is said to be a close friend of Miss Atwood's.

Scare Unkinks His Hair.

RICHMOND, Va., April 23.—Stephen Green, a negro, underwent an experience, the result of which took the kinks out of his black head covering, leaving it as straight and as white as the hair of any white man. Green and a companion, while hunting in the woods, lay down and slept before their camp fire. Green awakened with his clothes in flames. He ran four miles for help, tearing off his burning garments as he ran.

LYNN TRUNK SLAYER BEGS EARLY TRIAL

LYNN, April 23.—Vahan Nalbandian, who has confessed to the Lynn police that he held the revolver when Minas Momjian was shot to death, is in the Salem jail and begged that his trial be set for an early date. He has told the police that the shooting was witnessed by Serekerem Alemian, upon whose advice he hid the dead man's body in a trunk and hid the country. Alemian is now in Turkey and, although a valuable witness, will not be brought back to America by the State, according to the Lynn police.

Nalbandian has no witnesses to testify in his behalf, but firmly believes that he can convince the jury of his innocence of murder in the first degree. It is now generally believed in Lynn that the charge will be changed to manslaughter. District Attorney Peters has said that the evidence in the case is not as strong as it might be in such a case.

The Armenians of Lynn are now raising a fund to be used in the defense of Nalbandian, who is a naturalized American citizen and was very prominent among the Armenian residents of Lynn.

To Dance for Charity.

To aid the cause of procuring a new Home for Consumptives a dancing and whist party is to be held on Tuesday night in Whitney Hall, Codman Square, Brookline. Whist to be played from 8:30 to 10:30, followed by dancing to follow. Attractive souvenirs are to be given.

7 MORE PATROLMEN HAVE BEEN ACCUSED

With seven more patrolmen charged with neglecting their duty, a feeling of uncertainty prevails among all the members of the force. Four of the men who are to face trial boards are from Station 3, Joy street, and three from Station D, Dudley street.

Three of the Station 3 patrolmen are charged with visiting a Beacon street hotel while on duty. The fourth is accused of visiting a garage. The Station D men are also accused of leaving their beats while on duty. Sergeant Burns, Parker and Brooks say they caught them.

Commissioner O'Meara says:

"Division commanders need to be alert few offenders of this kind and whenever the offenders are discovered sharp inquiry follows, so as to free the members of suspicion imposed by the ones who are responsible."

FRENCH ELECTION TODAY.

PARIS, April 23.—The elections of the 591 deputies who are to rule in France for four years to come will take place tomorrow. Two weeks later, Sunday, May 8, elections which have no result will have a final balloting. It is not likely that the new Chamber of Deputies will differ greatly from the past. For a foreigner it is hard to see why a political leader in France has once seized on power in France should ever lose it.

MEAT PRICES JUMP; CHEAP CUTS HIGHER

Advance All Along the Line, With Hardest Blow to the Poor.

All kinds of meat cost more in Boston markets yesterday than they did one brief week ago.

The advance over the former high prices was general. Bacon led with a jump from 23 cents to 30 cents a pound. Rump steak was 30 cents last Saturday. Yesterday it was 35. Top round went from 25 to 28 cents.

Housekeepers starting out for Sunday marketing were appalled at the prices they found. The butchers could give little consolation. One Faneuil Hall dealer said:

"There is a scarcity of all kinds of meat in Boston. It is largely due to the large amounts of meat put in cold storage and to cutting down of shipments from the West. It is impossible to say when meat will be lower. The indications are for a further rise. The rise on cheaper cuts is larger in proportion than on the better ones. That hits the poor the more, of course."

	Week Ago.	Yesterday
Fore shins	8c	10c
Sahi meat	8c	10c
Fancy brisket	15c	17c
Fresh plate	18c	20c
Leg and loin	18c	20c

Bottom round	20c-17c	23c
Hindquarter lamb	20c	23c
Forequarter lamb	15c	18c

ARMY OF PARASITES AFTER GIPSY MOTHS

gipsy moth is in the egg stage he is attacked by the Monodontomerus Aereus, one of their entomological sleeves a pleasing but gratuitous known as the schedius kuvanae. Sched. kuv., as he is called for short, comes from Japan and he would rather fight than eat. He is a scrapper from the drop of the hat. The State bughouse out in Melrose Highlands recently released 1,000,000 sched. kuv. on the moth eggs. Another million is held in reserve.

Later the moths go into the larval stages, which are divided into seven weeks or two generations.

Following gipsy folk comes blepharipa scutellata. Next in the sequence of pains and aches for the larval stages are compsilura concinnata, exorista rubicida, gilsa, cryptetia gnava, trichodyza grandis and tachina flavipalpis.

After all these have made their rabid efforts from the gipsy moth larvae, enough larvae may survive to grow up into pupae. But now come the fungal fairyworld chalcis flavipes and monodontomerus aereus. Do these like moth pupae? They simply eat up alive.

If this isn't enough for the moth, there is a final pursuit waiting for the adult moth. This is the calosoma sycophanta. Cal. Syc. to non-lib pet name. Seeks out moth eggs, larvae or pupae. He waits till the moth is full grown. Then Cal. Syc. brushes up to Mister Moth and says: "Come on now and fight a real bug."

Even Betting by Now.

By this time it is even betting that Mister Moth will be taking the handles for Hoboken or Sheepsgrass, Wis., or some other retreat where the parasite crowd finds trembling and a moth may be at ease.

Messrs. Burke and Fiske give in their pamphlet detailed accounts of these imported parasites, their age, weight, colors, past performances and general form. As a "form-sheet" on the bug world's chart the pamphlet is a wonder. It also contains a table showing the progress of the different parasite colonies in Massachusetts, and when real results may be expected from them.

The pamphlet is carefully compiled and gives an idea of the vast scientific research invested in first finding out how to pursue with kid the gipsy and brown tail moths and then getting them to work in this country.

WASHBURN'S
GLIDDEN BALLOON REFUSES TO FLY

SPRINGFIELD, April 23.—Charles J. Glidden, who was to have celebrated the opening season for balloons this afternoon was so angry when the Springfield brew of gas failed to lift his balloon that he announced his determination never to try a flight from this point again. He says he will now make his headquarters in Pittsfield, where there is plenty of gas suitable for inflating balloons.

With James S. Bailey and Lewis J. Lyon of Boston, Mr. Glidden came to Springfield today for his first flight. He was using the balloon, Massachusetts, the property of the New England Aero club. Mr. Glidden complained that the gas with which the balloon was being inflated was of poor quality, but since the balloon is a large one he hoped it would be buoyant enough to carry three passengers.

Finally the balloon was packed full of Springfield gas. The three men got in the car and made ready to cast off. But the balloon only hung close to mother earth. Every sand bag except four was hoisted out. Still the Massachusetts showed no inclination to go to work. Mr. Glidden and his two disappointed friends got out. When the balloon still stubbornly refused to move, Mr. Glidden gave the valve cord a jerk and the gas was released.

The gas bag will probably be taken to Pittsfield, where Mr. Glidden says will be his headquarters for the coming season at least.

DEMOCRATS SEE VICTORY.

NORWICH, N. Y., April 23.—Its back to the wall fighting on the defensive for the first time in years the Republican organization of the thirty-seventh senatorial district is making desperate efforts to stem the steadily rising tide of public sentiment and to seat Prof. Ralph W. The special election next Thursday is conceded by New York Republicans to be very close and Democrats say they have won already. Their candidate is Edward L. Nash.

MAYOR WANTS GARAGE.

Plans to Make Chauffeur Foreman if Plans Are Carried Out.

John Rockett, Mayor Fitzgerald's chauffeur, will be appointed superintendent of the city chauffeurs and foreman of a new municipal garage if plans of the Mayor materialize. The city owns over thirty machines and hires chauffeur for each. They are kept in different garages and stables. The Mayor believes it would be an economical measure to have the city establish a garage in the central part of the city. For that purpose the Mayor has called a conference of all the municipal chauffeurs for this week.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., April 23.—Mrs. Virginia Gerette, a sixty-year old widow, and her baby grandchildren, Leonie Herbert, aged twenty-two months, and Leo, aged Herbert, aged two months, were killed by illuminating gas today. They were found dead on the pantry floor by Deputy Sheriff Father of the children, who became home to dinner at No. 905 Main street. It is thought that one of the children accidentally turned on a gas cock which was found open in a room adjoining the pantry.

SIMPLE SERVICES FOR MARK TWAIN IN NEW YORK

Rev. Drs. Henry Van Dyke and J. H. Twitchell Speak at Humorist's Funeral.

NEW YORK, April 23.—Simple services over the body of Mark Twain were held this afternoon in the Brick Presbyterian Church, Fifth avenue and Thirty-seventh street. The Rev. Dr. Henry Van Dyke of Princeton officiated and was assisted by the Rev. Dr. Joseph H. Twitchell of Hartford, in the funeral party which brought the body from Redding, Ct., at noon, were Mrs. Ossip G. Gabrilowitch, the only daughter of the dead humorist, and her husband; Albert Bigelow Paine; Jimmie Lansdon, a nephew; Dan Beard, the artist; Henry Loomis, superintendent of the Clemens' estate at Redding; Claude Bensiette, for many years Dr. Clemens' valet, and Nate Salsbury, housekeeper for the Clemens family for thirty-five years.

In Famous White Suit.

The casket in which the body reposes is of plain mahogany. The dead author is dressed in one of the white suits he was accustomed to wear in the last years of his life. The coffin plate bears the names Samuel L. Clemens and Mark Twain. On the lid of the coffin are four red roses.

A pile of the brick church this afternoon, even to the wreaths, one of laurel woven by the Lotos Club and the other of red roses.

Those seat in the church was occupied when Mr. Vanbyke opened and read the service. Two hundred cards had been issued and all of the holders of these were seated by the ushers in the street was allowed to surge into the church. Everybody who stood about on the sidewalk.

Among those who arrived early at the church were, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, William Dean Howells, Miss Mildred Howells, Brander Matthews, David Bispham, James Lane Allen, Peter Finley Dunne, Booker Washington and Hamlin Garland.

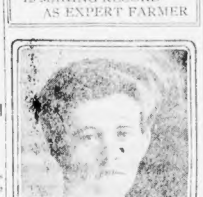
After the last hymn had been taken and the coffin lid had been closed, the body was put aboard the private car of E. B. Loomis, vice president of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad, and taken to Elmira where the burial will take place in sunrise afternoon beside Mr. Clemens' wife and daughters. The services at Elmira will be as simple as those here, and will be at the home of General Daughter, a relative of Mrs. Clemens.

SCHOOL HOUSE BILL

100 Men at Dorchester Building Quit Their Jobs.

One hundred workmen who were building the addition to the Dorchester High school struck at noon yesterday afternoon. Agent Arthur M. Huddell of the Building Trades Section of the Boston Central Labor Union ordered the men to quit work, and the reason for the strike is that the Mayor has not granted a hearing on the letting of the contract for the steam fitting of the Lincoln school. Mr. Huddell said that the steamfitting contractor on the old job is a union man entirely for that job nor did he pay full union wages. The same contractors have similar work on the Dorchester addition.

MELROSE GIRL WHO IS MAKING RECORD AS EXPERT FARMER



PERSIS BARTHOLOMEW

WOMAN FARMER WINS OVER MALE RIVALS

MISS PERSIS BARTHOLOMEW, a Melrose girl, twenty-three years old, is making a success as a chicken farmer on an "abandoned" farm in Westboro. She is the only executive woman farmer in Worcester County.

After a three-year course at Amherst Agricultural College, she rented Evergreen farm in Westboro in the Summer of 1908. Last year she cleared five acres on a profitable garden truck, on which she netted $500. She plans this Summer to make $200 an acre.

The old part of it is that Miss Bartholomew was not brought up on a farm. She went into farming for her health. She started in at Westboro with two college girl friends. The latter gave it up after a short time and went to Kingston. Miss Bartholomew stuck to her Westboro enterprise.

Beat Veterans to Market.

She had to borrow the money to pay the first month's rent on her farm, which she went into from L. F. Midgley, distributor. She hired her own fertilizers, instead of buying prepared ones. She found that Middlesex County land was good enough for market a little ahead of her rivals, so she could command the best prices.

Miss Bartholomew specialized in vegetables. Several girls were employed and instructed with marketmen to take her crops. She made daily trips into Worcester with her truck, leaving the farm at 5:30, arriving in Worcester at 6, and being back at the farm to work at 8 a. m.

She bought her father and mother for the farm, to run the house. For farm help she hired schoolboys at ten cents an hour. She says they worked better than men.

The engine Miss Bartholomew bought three horses. She has fifty apple trees and this year she will attend to the fruit end of her farming.

Discourages Women Farmers.

She is also raising poultry. Last Winter she contracted with her former neighbors for their eggs, and sold them in Worcester at an average profit of five cents a dozen. In spite of her success Miss Bartholomew does not advise women to become agricultural graduates and farmers.

"I would not advise women to become farm managers. It is hard work, and while a woman is peculiarly fitted for the life, but her field is not of it. That belongs to the men, and let them run it."

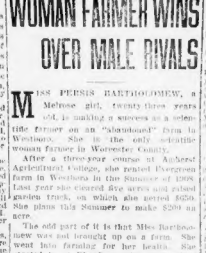
Peary Gets 6 Months' Leave.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—The Navy Department today granted six months leave to Lieutenant Robert E. Peary, the Arctic explorer, with permission to go abroad.

HERE IS BOSTON'S VERDICT ON BEST NOVELS

Figures Showing How "Athens of America" Rates the Leading Works of Fiction.

VOTE OF LEADERS IN "BEST NOVELS" CONTEST



THE "Best Novels" contest conducted by the Boston American has been the most interesting literary event that has taken place in this city in many years. All over the United States and, in fact, all over the world, Boston is considered the literary center of America. It is also conceded to be the most cultured community in this hemisphere. The Boston verdict as to books, art or music is looked upon all over this country as a supreme court decision.

The "Best Novels" contest has attracted the widest attention. Not only is a great reading public interested, but all the publishers are watching it as well. Nothing in recent years has provided a more accurate or interesting test of the literary taste of Boston with the people. The BOSTON AMERICAN has the largest circulation of any newspaper published in Boston. Moreover, it is a circulation which reaches all classes.

Old Authors Are Best.

The interest taken by the people in the "Best Novels" contest is extraordinary and gratifying. More than a million pieces of books were sent to the BOSTON AMERICAN, each expressing the opinion of a widely read person. These lists show many things. They show that old standard writers are still the most widely read and the best liked.

They show, so far, that Victor Hugo, Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, Sir Walter Scott, Charles Dickens, Thackeray, Fenimore Cooper, William M. Thackeray, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Alexandre Dumas, Charles Reade and Bulwer Lytton, in the order named, are the most read popular writers of the 19th generation, although each and all of these are dead.

The Best-Liked Books.

The ten best-liked novels disclosed by this contest are "Les Miserables," "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Ivanhoe," "David Copperfield," "Ben Hur," "Quality of Mercy," "The Scarlet Letter," "A Tale of Two Cities," "Monte Cristo" and "Pride and Prejudice." Charles Dickens is the only author who has more than one book in the first ten. Three American authors, Mrs. Stowe, Hawthorne and Wallace are included in the ten most popular novelists, and three in one Frenchman, Hugo, and one Spaniard, Cervantes. One remarkable thing about the list is the interest displayed in Charles Dickens' "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

The popular verdict rendered by the readers of the Boston American will be closely scored with the opinions expressed by the literary critics of the country. Well up in the list of the twenty-five leading novels are Robinson Crusoe, Don Quixote, "The Count of Monte Cristo," "The Last of the Mohicans," "The Vicar of Wakefield," by Oliver Goldsmith, and "Pilgrim's Progress," by John Bunyan.

Contest Closes Wednesday.

The "Best Novels" contest will close on Wednesday next at 12 o'clock noon. No lists can be considered which are not received in the Boston American office on or before that hour. The moment the clock strikes the board of judges who will select the prize winners from the more than 1,000,000 lists sent in will be announced later. They will be announced in the Sunday issue.

Winners in the contest will be announced in the Boston Sunday American of May 1.

Remember:

Prize winners will be announced next Sunday.

Now, what is YOUR opinion as to the ten best, most ennobling novels ever written? Send in YOUR opinion now. It will be carefully considered and you may win one of the cash prizes. Remember

For the best list the American will give a prize of $100, for the next best a prize of $5, and for the next ten prizes of $1 each. The winning lists will be adjudged by a committee of Boston literary people.

Address "Best Novels" Editor, Boston American, No. 59 Summer street.

E. E. BROWN FOR SEALER.

Colored Lawyer to Be Appointed By the Mayor.

Edward Everett Brown, a colored lawyer, will be named by Mayor Fitzgerald Sealer of Weights and Measures, to succeed Charles B. Woolley, in making the appointment the Mayor will make it known that he has no sympathy for those who have raised objection to the appointment of Brown on account of his color. The delay in officially naming Brown for the position is due to the fact that the Mayor is not yet satisfied that it comes under civil service regulations. As soon as the Mayor definitely establishes whether or not the Civil Service Commission has confirmed Brown's action his position he will make the appointment.

PEOPLE'S PALACE SUICIDE.

Ordered to Leave, Young Man Swallows Poison.

There is some mystery in the suicide of Elmer Canada, aged twenty, at the People's Palace, the Salvation Army's principal barracks, yesterday. Major Jessie Shepard of the Army said the young man had been a frequenter lodger in the Palace, but he had ordered him away for good reasons. Then, according to Major Shepard, Canada, on the hearing of Charles Hallaway, the thirteen-year-old son, who was employed at the Palace, left. He was ordered to leave at once Canada said, "I guess I'll leave even sooner" and swallowed poison, dying in a few minutes.

Eat and Get Thin

This is turning an old phrase face about, but modern methods of reducing fat have made this revision possible.

If you are overfat and also averse to physical exertion and likewise fond of the table and still want to reduce your excess flesh several pounds, do this: Go to your druggist (or write the Marmola Co., No. 1 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich.) and (or write him for send them) 75 cents. For the modest amount of money the druggist will put you in the way of satisfying your ambition for a slice, trim, slim figure. Eat what you like, exercising and otherwise but take your little tablet faithfully after meals and before retiring. Quickly take unto themselves amazing forms of natural and easily decided in firm flesh and trim outline.

FAIR PRICE OR MILK FAMINE, LAST WORD OF PRODUCERS

Contractors Blame Farmers' Out-of-Date Methods for the Clash.

If Boston facing a milk famine? It surely is, say the farmers for a hundred miles around about—the men who send the produce of their dairies daily to this city.

"Pay us Winter prices, 25½ cents for a quart or 6½ quarts, or go without milk," is the ultimatum of the Boston Co-operative Milk Producers' Association to the big contractors.

"The contractors are getting by far the best of it," the farmers through their officials say, "and we're tired of making milk at a loss. The Boston contractors must give us Winter prices or we shall keep our milk at home and feed it to calves and pigs."

"No danger of a milk famine at all," reply the big contractors like Hood & Co., D. Whiting & Sons, Grausteen & Co. and smaller concerns.

"The farmers are bluffing and, what is more, are asking for something wholly unreasonable. We are paying them more than their milk than they can get for it as butter and cheese. If they raise calves and pigs on the skimmed milk, all right, but the biggest contractors, after a meeting with their attorneys, have decided to stand firm in their promise to resist the farmers' unjust demands."

What the Contractors Say.

In a very elaborate statistical statement the big milk contractors point out why the farmers' demands are unjust. They say producers, making unreasonable demands, in addition, the statement declares that:

The New England "cows' contest" and "model dairies" have disregarded every element of economy in making milk. They are steadfastly declined to adopt modern methods and reduce the cost of production. Instead they want to keep prices high by reducing production themselves. They have neglected to raise grains and grasses and spend a large part of their monthly milk checks for these necessaries. They are consumers of milk.

They have allowed their naturally unprofitable farms to run into mere pasturage and permitted young brush and forest growth to constantly diminish their feed areas.

Now, when they ought to have a rich green pasture into which to turn their cows and make milk at a larger profit than during the Winter months they have no feed to feed costly $20-ton silage and grains, the fruit of their pastures almost worthless. This means, of course, that they must consume large quantities which ought to be unnecessary.

Consumer Must Pay.

"If we consent to listen to and agree to their present unreasonable demands we shall have to increase the price to the consumer from 8 to 9 cents per quart."

The contractors profess to have little fear of the organization of the producing farmers and ridicule it largely as a "paper combination."

The milk producers, at a meeting in the Oakes House early in the week, adopted the resolutions in which the demands are made.

The Boston price of milk for the Summer months, effective May 1 to September 1, must be the same to the farmer as last year—$2 a hundred pounds. To the contractors by the 15th of the following month, when payment is received, a half will shall be deducted from each can shipped to cover the cost of collecting company, and this shall be a part of the individual price.

Milk producers of New Hampshire who ship to Portsmouth, Rye, Greenland and Newington, Kittery and Eliot, Me., who furnish a large part of the milk sold in Boston, will join in the demands and that of the contractors wanted to do business with them they must have to pay them winter prices, otherwise they will not get milk at all. The strike, it is said, will not affect the public, who will get the milk at the usual prices.

Replying to the claims of the contractors that the demands of the farmers' organization had this to say:

Good Farm Labor Scarce.

"It is all very well for the contractors to talk, but conditions, and theories and not carefully prepared figures from this or that State experimental station, govern in this case. Grain is bound at $1.75 a hundred, a prohibitive price, and that bought, which may have lasted for months, finds our cows almost all brown and nearly bare. More than that it is impossible for farmers to get competent labor at any price. Of course, we can't feed it to our cows.

"A man may have a first-class dairy, say of twenty cows, making thirty-five cans, 875 quarts each a day. By close attention to business he has every cow up to her limit of production, and incidentally has reduced the cost of producing to 1.75 a hundred. Then two or three men quit for other business or because they can get better wages elsewhere except to go back to the farm. Two cows are sold, and in April the new cows can until we break in the new men. The dairy falls off, the cows drop behind. Nothing remains stationary in milk. Then the selling price goes up.

In the contractors' statement of prices paid to the farmers and compared with other cities the following figures are made:

What Other Cities Pay.

It is alleged by the local contractors that they paid an average price of $1.35 per hundred pounds of milk in Boston in 1909 as compared with $1.25 in New York; 98 cents, they say that in Boston they paid $1.35; New York, $1.25; Philadelphia, $1.28; Chicago, $1.24. Last year Boston contractors say they paid the dairy farmers $1.83 per 100; New York, $1.50; Philadelphia, $1.54; and Chicago $1.47.

For the first four months of this year they give these figures:

Boston paid in January, $2 per 100; New York, $1.50; Boston in February, $1.80; New York, $1.50; Boston in March, $1.75; New York, $1.50; Boston in April, $1.78; New York, $1.50.

The contractors assert that the farmers' demand on average price for the coming year of $2 per 100 pounds, while producers $1.25 for the first four months, they say, is equivalent to asking 2½ cents per quart or 10 cents per gallon.

COMPROMISE ON MILK.

Committee Agrees on Bill Protecting Farmers.

The milk problem at the State House is beginning to unravel. After months of uncertainty the Committee on Agriculture has agreed upon a bill which will protect the farmer who sells milk below the standard, but from prosecution until after he has been notified and until he has persisted in selling milk below standard. The committee has also agreed upon a bill which will meet the best objections from the dairy high standard and no standard factions.

Mayflower Descendant.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Allerton Rogers Archer, widow of Stephen Durkee Archer, is to be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home of Mrs. Archer, Archer Saunders, No. 3 Cedar park, Roxbury. Mrs. Archer was born in Yarmouth, May 24, 1827. She lacked but a month of being eighty-three. She was a lineal descendant of Mary Allerton who came to Plymouth on the Mayflower.

REVOLT SPREADS IN CHINA; U. S. FLEET TO THE RESCUE

Chang-Sha Beleaguered by Great Host of Rioters; All White Men Leave City.

PEKIN, April 23.—The entire Asiatic fleet of the United States was today ordered upon to be ready to proceed to China to protect American citizens. United States Minister Calhoun, according to advices officially received here, has wired the State Department that the docks to China are bordering on revolution, and that the lives of Americans and other foreigners are in great danger than at any time since the great Boxer uprising.

The gunboat Cleveland is already at Hankow, but word has been sent to rush one in case of real trouble. Bluejackets and marines will be needed on land to protect white men and the property of the Americans and other foreign missions.

All Foreigners Flee.

Under a strong military escort all the foreigners, including all the missionaries stationed in the district, to-day left Changsha, and are now aboard the British warships in the harbor.

Only one white man remains in the city, and he refused to leave his post.

The city is now in a state of siege. The mobs, at first disorganized and only clamoring for food because of the advance in the price of rice, have now, it is said, now become an organized army and are fighting the loyal troops, with the advantage on their side. Thousands of soldiers have deserted the Government standard and joined what has become a real revolution. With the rioting in Changsha all over the province for his protection of foreigners, whom the natives blame for the high price of rice, all authority has been broken down. The province is in a state of anarchy.

The slight anti-foreign tone of the riots has grown into a threatening demand for the killing of all strangers. Only the British warships in the harbor have prevented a slaughter.

Missionaries Driven Out.

Even the missionaries, who in Hunan Province have never suffered, are forced to flee. All escaped in safety from Changsha, but an angry mob of frenzied natives gathered at the station to bid them farewell.

The Norwegian missionaries have been driven out of Ping-Kiang, fifty miles to the south of Changsha. The mob of rioters has driven away the customs officials, defeated a force of troops sent to quell it, and are reported to be marching on Changsha. Admiral Sah, in command of the Asiatic fleet at Manila, has ordered the summary execution of all found setting fire and looting. This has somewhat checked the looting. Further threats against foreigners have ceased, however, and rioting is frequent in various quarters.

The further report of pillage and murder reached here to-day, in spite of the cutting of telegraph wires by the rioters, is vague and christian, are abandoning their homes and property in the subjugated districts.

Reports of fighting in the presence of 3,000 troops in Chang Sha and the fact that practically all the foreigners in the province in the vicinity of the capital have fled to Shanghai, would indicate that more than a mere local uprising is in progress. Reports of the uprising and a score of villages and settlements are being received.

Hu-Nan In Revolt.

The government is unable to send into the province an adequate force to control the rioting, and has called upon the provincial troops to suppress it. The Hu-Nan 20,000,000 inhabitants Hu-Nan to-day is virtually a revolting nation within a nation.

Among the passengers of a China liner which arrived here today acting on the advice of the British consul, who urged all to leave the city. The natives of Hankow have formed a band of volunteers to keep order in the quarter leading the foreigners to the Chinese city.

RAILROAD CONSPIRACY!

Traveling Agents Lured to Tavern and Both Given Gold Watches.

Richard J. Sheehan, traveling agent for the Clyde line in Boston, and John Cahill, city passenger agent of the Clyde Island lines, were the victims of a "conspiracy" yesterday when the representatives of the big transportation lines out of Boston lured them to the Boston Tavern.

There each was presented with a beautiful gold watch by Edward Barry, New England tourist agent for the Wabash railroad, delegated by his colleagues. Mr. Sheehan is leaving Boston for New York, where he will become the general agent of the Clyde and Mallory lines. Mr. Cahill goes to Pittsburg as city passenger agent.

TEETH EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN 50 CENTS

I have an extensive extracting patronage, probably the largest in Boston—people come to me from all over—from all parts of the country—I do it carefully, safely, surely and without pain. Have been doing it painlessly for many years. I do not pretend to use any wonderful anaesthetic—I do not use it—but any wonderful anaesthetic—I do not use it—but any well-known agents which have proved safe and efficient when used intelligently, as I use Somnoform and Laughing Gas (nitrous-oxide gas), which are injected into the system by painless means through the gums—it depends upon the patient and the condition of the teeth. In some instances for patients living their own distance to go before I do my object to their doing so, but I recommend Somnoform I can remove any number of teeth for any patient at one sitting, painlessly. I do not use these so-called "after effects," as commonly follow the use of Ether. Prices for extracting, with Myriad 50 cents; with Somnoform or Gas $1.00. No charge for extracting if you order artificial teeth.

DO NOT FORGET

that my prices for Artificial Teeth, Fillings and all dental work are the lowest in Boston for the best service. I do my work with great thoroughness and I know I can please you. Telephone connection.

Nothing to Wear; So Lady Sarah Didn't Go to Gould Wedding

Distressing Plight of Titled English-woman Is Put Squarely Up to British Express Company.

NEW YORK, April 23 — Though she brought twenty-one trunks to New York, Lady Sarah Wilson, daughter of the late Duke of Marlborough, was unable to attend the Jerome-Gould wedding because she had nothing to wear.

She was in an even worse predicament that the celebrated "Miss Flora McFlimsey of Madison Square," Lady Sarah had clothes, quantities of them, in twenty-one trunks. But a brutal express company failed to deliver the trunks at the St. Regis until several hours after the ceremony. Therefore the name of Lady Sarah Wilson was not among "those present."

"It was worse than anything I ever experienced in Stateling," she said.

That is an illuminating comparison. For Lady Sarah was with her husband, Sub Captain Gordon Wilson, in Mafeking at the outbreak of the Boer War. She acted as a British spy, was captured, was imprisoned, escaped and was finally exchanged as a prisoner of war.

CROCKER CASE HELD UP.

Judge Wait will in a day or two give his decision on the question raised yesterday by Charles F. Choate, Jr., as to the prospects of a change of venue motion in a criminal case in Massachusetts.

Acting for former City Treasurer George U. Crocker, recently indicted with Charles H. Lewis and John J. Carty in connection with the alleged bribing of jurors in the will case, Mr. Choate argued yesterday before Judge Wait in chambers and raised certain questions preliminary to getting that the respondents ought not to be tried in another county. Henry F. Dutton appeared for Lewis and James H. Sweeney for Carroy.

No motion for a change of venue or a trial of Crocker, Lewis and Conroy in another county has yet been made. District Attorney Pelletier argued that there would be no unnecessary precedent for the granting of a change of venue.

MAYOR DEMANDS CIVILITY.

Orders Phone Operator at City Hospital Suspended.

Mayor Fitzgerald intends that his circular letter calling for a high standard of courtesy from city employes in their dealings with the public shall be strictly enforced, and to impress upon them his sincerity in the matter he yesterday ordered Dr. McCollom of the City Hospital to suspend for a week operator at the institution "if 2nd occasion to call up the Hospital on the evening recently," said the Mayor, "and the operator inquired in a surly manner who I was and what I wanted. I called up Dr. McCollom and told him to remove the operator from his position, and place a man there who is innately kindly and sympathetic. Persons who have occasion to call at the City Hospital are entitled to courteous treatment and not surliness."

Patrolman Gray of Station 10 assigned to the detective department, and Patrolmen Lewis and Kelly, were detailed to the Hospital to-day.

MILK DEALERS CALL ON MAYOR FOR HELP

Independents Name Committee to Fight Sealed Receptacle Order of Board.

The Baby and Bottle question loomed up bigger than ever last night when, still indignant because of the Board of Health order that milk must hereafter be sold in sealed receptacles, the Independent Milk Dealers named a committee to wait on Mayor Fitzgerald with a request for a public hearing before His Honor. The Independents are not at all satisfied that they get a square deal before the Health Board.

At the same time Isaac Isaacs, once an assistant district attorney under John B. Moran, came out with a long letter to the newspapers in which he attacked the Boston Board of Health and called upon Mayor Fitzgerald for help.

Say Poor Will Suffer.

Both the milkmen and Attorney Isaacs assert that the Boston Health Board increases a lump in the price of the poor man's milk by two cents a quart. Milk can be bought from the dip tanks, they say, at 6½ cents a quart, but 6½ cent bottles will cost eight or nine cents, they say. Under the new order, they assert, the smallest quantity that can be sold will be a pint. At present the boarding-keepers can send out for two cents worth.

Joseph Hurley of Charlestown, Joseph Buckley of Arlington, John Mulcahy of Somerville and Roland N. Toothaker of Somerville were named a committee by the Independent Milkmen to see the Mayor about a hearing at City Hall to-day.

Says Trust Is Shielded.

In his letter Mr. Isaacs said:

"It is my opinion at this time that the honorable, efficient Board of Health in the prosecution of the violators of the milk law, seldom if ever during the three years I was connected with the office of Attorney's office prosecuted the Milk Trust. It is stated, so that they would be amenable to more severe penalties for a second or third offence, and so that their customers might not be imposed upon by the impure milk or milk that did not come up to the standard, but they prosecute and burden with unjust record the innocent employees and servants of the Trust. But not so with the individual dealer; his hired man was not brought in, and upon a second or third conviction he was fined fifty or a hundred dollars and finally driven to sell out to the Trust. You can find this out, Mr. Mayor."

CATARRH OF KIDNEYS SCOURGE OF CIVILIZATION

SEVERE CASE OF CATARRH OF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER CURED BY PE-RU-NA.

Mr. George King, Deputy Sheriff of Rensselaer Co., N. Y., for years was a well-known merchant of Troy. In a letter from No. 45 King St., Troy, N. Y., he writes:

"Peruna cured me from what the doctors were afraid would turn into Bright's disease, after I had suffered with catarrh of the bladder and kidneys trouble.

"Peruna is a blessing to a sick man. Eight bottles made me a well man and were worth more than a thousand dollars to me.

"I cannot speak too highly of it. It is now four years since I was troubled, and I have enjoyed perfect health since."

Address Medical Department, The Peruna Co., Columbus, O.

CATARRH of the kidneys—that is what makes people have weak backs. It is catarrh of the kidneys.

The catarrhal products are irritating and are sapping away the vitality of the kidney, which makes the back weak.

This causes people to become old before their time—holding on to their backs—unable to stoop over without pain—and having sudden cramps in the muscles of the back.

GLOVER WILL UPHELD BY JUDGE; WIDOW EXONERATED

Court Finds There Was No Undue Influence Proved on Her Part.

JUDGE McINTIRE, of East Cambridge, yesterday, decided in the famous Glover will contest that the document had been executed by Clarence F. Glover without undue influence by Mrs. Lillian M. Glover.

From the judge's decision it is made public that the lawyers who contested the will claim that they could have shown that Mrs. Glover bought the revolver with which Glover was killed and that they could, if they had been allowed, throw more light on the actions of Mrs. Glover while Hattie Le Blanc was in hiding in the cellar from three days to the night following the tragedy.

Jesse M. Gove, C. S. MacFarland, George T. Perry and John J. Scott, the lawyers for the contestants, say that they would appeal the case and ask for a jury trial, if Lawyer Scott said:

"The statute gives us the right of appeal. We shall undoubtedly take an appeal and enter the same in the Supreme Judicial Court. The case is somewhat complicated, and we feel that it is of such a nature that it might well be submitted to a jury of twelve men. We shall make application to the Probate Court for a certificate for a jury trial. We think that we would appeal the case and ask for a jury trial," Lawyer Scott said.

The case is somewhat complicated, and we feel that it is of such a nature that it might well be submitted to a jury of twelve men. We shall make application to the Probate Court for a certificate for a jury trial. We think that we would appeal the case and ask for a jury trial," Lawyer Scott said.

Want Girl to Testify.

"We were somewhat handicapped in the trial. The Glover household was, for the most part, a sealed book to us. We were restricted in the cross examination of our evidence, and we were obliged to get along without the testimony of Hattie, and this will materially affect the issue.

"While Glover may have been mistaken because of his terror in the declaration as to the identity of the person who shot him, Judge McIntire says, he does not believe that he intentionally erred. But if Mrs. Glover shot her husband, the Judge thinks that such an act would have been more consistent with revenge for his attempts to bribe Le Blanc into the act of killing so that she might enjoy his property.

Judge McIntire made the following comment relative to the dying statement of Glover when today he was questioned in part: "She won't shoot me, will she?" when he asked:

What Did Victim Mean?

The contestants declared that Glover meant: "She won't shoot me (again) will she?" while Judge McIntire apparently thinks that he may have meant, "She won't shoot me (this) will she?"

By the will Mrs. Glover comes into three-fourths of the income of the estate for life, or as much of the principal as Lawyer Samuel H. Ordway deems necessary, one-fourth to go to Seymour Glover and any residue that may remain to him or his heirs after the death of Mrs. Glover.

The decision in part follows:

"Much of the evidence submitted would seem at first to be irrelevant at the trial of an issue of undue influence exercised upon the maker of a will, and it should have been excluded were it not for the unusual specifications which I have named covering a alleged prosecution and involving all of the facts heretofore set forth. The evidence relating to what was said after the execution of the will, particularly that concerning the circumstances of the violent death of Glover and the happenings immediately after, as far as they bear on this court is concerned, were received only as incidents and parts of the general plot regarding duress in making the will, relating to and in explanation of the bequest to his wife, and whether the circumstances is not the produce of her mind rather than that of Glover.

Believes He Was Truthful.

"It may be remarked here in considering the contention of the contestants that whosoever may be the person who made the murderous assault upon Glover in that dark room, it does not seem at all unnatural for him to have believed it to have been Hattie Le Blanc, even though as he said to the doctor, he could conceive of no reason for her doing so under the circumstances which brought them there together. It was reasonable for him to suppose that he and the were the only ones present; that none other knew of their clandestine visit. That she was known to him, and that when he turned and wrested a key from her hand, it was with the hand of Hattie to Blanc. In the darkness and in his excited condition it is possible for him to have been mistaken in his conclusion, or that he may not have been entirely clear in consequence of the pain which he was undergoing to excuse his pain; but I am unable to believe the intention, in view of all the circumstances of the attack, knowing as he did from the physicians the seriousness of his condition, he intentionally falsified to them.

"Admit, as the contestants argue, that the testimony points convincingly to Lillian Glover as the assassin; her act would seem to be more consistent with a premeditated purpose of revenge for persisting in his improper relations with Hattie than with a supposed plan to force him to make a will for the purpose of taking his life and benefiting by it."

PRINCE DISLIKES POMP.

Chinese at San Francisco Leaves Banquet for This Reason.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 23.—Prince Tsai Tao, uncle of the Emperor of China, and brother of the Regent, was the guest of honor at a reception given by the Chinese Six Companies. The Prince was to have received a silver punch bowl from the Six Companies, but he rose abruptly and left the hall just before the time for the presentation. His hasty departure occasioned much surprise. Several of his suite followed him to the elevator. He informed them that he was tired of formality and would receive the punch bowl in his room if they would bring it there. The gift later was taken to his room.

Borah Attacks Traffic Plan.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—The strongest speech delivered in the Senate against the proposed traffic agreements permitted under the administration bill was made today by Senator Borah of Idaho, who attacked it. The burden of his argument was to be pressed by Mr. Elkins, the Sherman anti-trust law so far as it relates to railroads, will be absolutely nullified.

40 CENTS TAX JUMP VEXES MAYOR AND SCHOOL BOARD

Both Sides Agree on the Issue; Welfare of the Children Versus People's Pockets.

WITH a jump of forty cents in the tax rate staring them in the face on one side, and confronted on the other by 18,888 public school children pulling over their books in halls, basements and other temporary quarters, the ten nine members of the Common School Committee met at 5 o'clock to-morrow afternoon in one of the most important conferences ever held in Mayor Fitzgerald's office.

The School Committee passed an order the other day calling for $520,857 for new school-house construction. Mayor Fitzgerald vetoed it. Promptly it was said that the school committee would pass the order over the Mayor's veto.

The position of the school committee men is that new buildings are absolutely necessary. They say the Prescott school in Charlestown is a menace. They say it is a shame to Boston that little folks and their teachers should be housed in such a place as the Way Street school. They say the Columbia Theatre, with its back on Columbus Park directly under New Haven trains passing directly under the windows at the rate of one or two a minute. Then they talk about the Little Folks, the study halls and basements and other temporary quarters.

Where the Mayor Disagrees.

Up to this point the Mayor and the School Committee are shoulder to shoulder. They are in full accord about the schools. They part company on the tax rate. Mr. Fitzgerald will not be a party, he says, to a boost of forty cents in the tax rate, that is, from $16.60 to $17.00.

At City Hall and in Mason street they are pointing to the Finance Commission as putting it up to the Finance Commission. This very goes that committee directly under the fire. The Finance Commission will not stand for it. It cannot do it. It cannot recommend it. It will be pleased to support the proposition. I think you might as well say it.

The Schoolhouse Bond Bill was put in what was referred to the Committee on Cities.

Everything seemed to be breaking smoothly, and everybody appeared to be happy, when the Finance Commission came in. Chairman James A. Sullivan objected to bond issues. He advised the pay-as-you-go policy. He suggested that the old statute permitting the School Committee to issue certificates of indebtedness to meet current expenses be revived. He said he would be pleased to support the proposition. I think you might as well say it.

Children Versus Economy.

"Comment at this time," said Dr. David O. Kelley, member of the Finance Commission, "would be premature. I do not like those words 'pay-as-you-go policy.' The proposition is a question of economy, between the children and the people. It is an academic question of economy, between the Finance Commission and the Mayor."

"Then," said Mr. Magenis, "that, if the Finance Commission is correct, the Mayor is wrong in vetoing the appropriation. I understand that the tax will go up forty cents on a thousand."

"Conditions Deplorable."

"The Way street school building," Mr. Magenis continued, "has been condemned. We can't have the windows open in the schools. Children are passing at the rate of one or two a minute. The Prescott school conditions are in a sinful condition. I am in fear all the time that something terrible will happen to them. The fire escape won't work. In East Boston we have a school building on a dirt dump. The teachers have to tell the children stories after they have begun. They can't do so under the walls and ceiling in the building are dusty and unsafe."

"The Mayor has hinted in his veto that repairs would be considerable. Is that the condition? Why hasn't the School House Commission repaired them? Are the repairs going on? Isn't it time for the law is such that all we can do is to 'pay as you go' policy? Isn't it time for the Commission must furnish them and care for them?"

"When you place the children second in consideration I have nothing to say except that it is false economy. There is no taxpayer in Boston who would object to the increase in his taxes if he realized conditions.

"I can say what action the School Board will take at its meeting Monday afternoon, but I will say for the people first, and the taxpayers next, when the School Board meets that they have a country town would stand for them."

"I am in favor of Mayor Fitzgerald's credit for trying to work for economy and I am in favor of doing what is right, but if we want new buildings in the city, but other children should be sacrificed."

To-morrow afternoon's will be an "executive" meeting of the School Committee. Chairman David A. Ellis may or may not bring up the Mayor's veto of the $520,857 order. If the committee doesn't bring it up the order goes over to the next "regular" meeting on May 2.

Neighbors Open War On Chantecler Crew

Now the Somerville Folk Are Looking for Law to Quiet Feathered Screecher.

Two long lines of backyards in Somerville, where once the neighbors were in the habit of hanging over the fences for gossip, are now deserted. For two streets have declared war. And it is all over a chantecler crow, raised from the time it was a crowlet or, better, a mere "peep," by James H. Witherell of No. 7 Fellsway East.

The Fellsway East people love Chantecler Chauncey, as he is known, but the people along Broadway, which is parallel to Fellsway East, call him the "screeching crow."

James F. Spear, whose backyard adjoins the yard where Chantecler Chauncey takes his morning gymnastic, has been up the gauntlet for his neighbors, and complained to Chief of Police Kendall and to the Somerville Police Court. He says he can't sleep, and that the crow is a nuisance.

HOSE CART CRASHES INTO AN AMBULANCE

LYNN, April 23.—Several firemen and three ambulance drivers to-night had a narrow escape from serious injury when an ambulance and a hose wagon from the Cayette street engine house collided at Spring and Broadway streets. Both the ambulance and the hose wagon and the vehicles were answering an alarm for fire in Hilliard & Merrill's shoe factory, No. 50 Broad street.

The ambulance was driven by Joseph Flanagan. Inside were Captain William Rose and Policeman John Stringer. The hose wagon was driven by Frank Cleary. The pole of the hose wagon ripped the top off the ambulance, throwing Driver Rowe to the opposite side. He and Stringer jumped to leap out over the backs of the horses drawing the hose wagon fell and were hurt. Captain Rose of course saw the accident.

The fire was caused by spontaneous combustion of dust and leather scraps in the fifth floor of the Hilliard & Merrill factory in the heart of the shoe district. Flames burned the street three cars and of three large lodging houses and for a time there was great excitement. The alarm was sounded by automatic mechanism in the factory. The damage was not more than $50.

WORK FOR "SANE FOURTH."

Boston 1915 Special Committee Will Get Busy This Week.

Various organizations led by the special committee appointed by the Committee of 150 of the Boston 1915 movement, will actively take up the work this week of arranging a more safe and sane Fourth of July celebration for 1915. Ex-Mayor P. Monroe last night said that frequent meetings would be held by the organization, and that co-operation with the committee including the Boston School Committee.

It is proposed this year to ask for more sirfigure, as the committee is considering the sale of cannon firecrackers, toy pistols, blank cartridges and other explosives, and a large enforcement of present regulations governing their use. The committee hopes to repeat the brilliant pageant at Franklin Park or some other large park resort, as the Fourth fell at South Boston and exhibitions of fire works in the evening.

TO DIG INTO BOSTON NOOKS.

Hemstreets Plan Book on Model Which Has Made Success.

With a bigger success for their "Nooks and Corners of Old London," just from the press, than even the phenomenal sale several years ago of the "Nooks and Corners of Old New York," Charles and Marie Hemstreet now declare they will present a book of equal interest on what this old city offers in the same line.

For years a working newspaper reporter in New York city Mr. Hemstreet was peculiarly qualified for his task of putting so much in so little. He was ably assisted by his wife, Mrs. Marie Hemstreet, who verse has for years been featured in leading magazines.

James Pott & Co. have brought out "Nooks and Corners of Old London." The Scribners brought out the first of the series, "Nooks and Corners of Old New York," Charles and Marie Hemstreet now declare they will present a book of equal interest on what this old city offers in the same line.

"We have always looked forward to the time when we could write a book about Boston," said Mr. Hemstreet, "and we have felt that for its wealth of the queer corners in the world, those of Boston and New England seem to us to be the dearest, oddest, grimmest, most fascinating of all."

NO TUBERCULOSIS TALK.

LYNN, April 23.—Although other ministers have seconded to the wishes of the National Tuberculosis Association and will devote one service to-morrow to a lecture on that subject, the Rev. Francis Goodhue of St. Paul's M. E. church has refused to bring the subject into the pulpit.

"There is too much talk about the terrible dangers of tuberculosis," he says. The Rev. George H. Gale of the First Congregational will give a stereopticon lecture.

MILLIONS IN FINES MAY COME TO STATE

Trefry to Ask Attorney-General to Act on Failures to Make Tax Returns.

William D. T. Trefry of Marblehead, Tax Commissioner of the Commonwealth, declared last night his intention to call to the attention of the law department every case wherein trustees, executors, administrators and guardians fail to file at the State House this month certain information regarding property holdings called for in a law passed by last year's Legislature.

Failure to comply with this law means a fine, to be paid in cash. How much it may mean to the State was indicated last night when gentlemen with pencils got busy at the State House and figured out the possible collection of between $450,000 and $20,000,000.

Up to Attorney-General.

"Well," said Tax Commissioner Trefry, "those are big figures, and, while I know something about law, I am not the State's attorney. All I can say is that I propose to perform my duty and that every individual case will be duly reported to the Attorney-General. Mr. Malone will apply the law to the situation."

The law referred to is Chapter 528 of the Acts of 1909. This is an act providing a penalty for trustees, executors, administrators and guardians who fail to file the returns required by section 8 of part 3 of Chapter 490 of the Acts of 1905. Section 8 requires that a guardian who holds property belonging to a stock in ANY CORPORATION, or an executor, administrator, trustee or other person who holds in trust such stock, shall annually, between the first and fourth day of April, return UNDER OATH to the Tax Commissioner the number and amount of such stock held by him on the first day of April next preceding the time such return is required.

The penalty for the neglect or refusal to make such return, or to make a false return, is $1000 for each offense.

No Penalty Attached.

Section 8 is a codification of previously enacted laws. Pp to and including last year it had been the subject of considerable hilarity among those to whom it has applied because there was NO PENALTY attached for violation of these provisions.

FEAR WOLTER'S SUICIDE.

Slayer of Ruth Wheeler Will Hear His Doom Wednesday.

NEW YORK, April 23.—Albert Wolter, eighteen years old, convicted of the murder of Ruth Wheeler, fifteen years old, will go to Sing Sing within four days. There he will expiate his crime in the death chair. He is sentenced Wednesday.

It was one of the shortest and yet one of the most dramatic trials that ever took place in this city. While Lawyer Scott was making a motion for a new trial for the boy's life, a lifeless, charred body in the band of the dead girl, holding Wolter's late—lay so that it was in view of the jury.

Wolter arose to-day without a trace of worry. There was little indication of a dread to his manner. Nevertheless, the guard over him was doubled to-day to prevent any attempt at suicide. A carving knife was secured from him only moments. He was doubled even a spoon and the cup.

"DON'T BE A JUNE BUG!"

Ex-Gov. Guild Gives Some Poetic Advice, But Fails to Explain.

On the editorial page of former Governor Guild's Boston Herald, which he owns, in the place of honor and in full-face type, appeared this poem:

"DON'T BE A JUNE BUG.

The June bug hurts in everywhere
From dawning unto night;
He always gets the angry stare,
He always bumps his head.

A poem name called upon Editor Guild yesterday to inquire whether the poem had any political significance. She, for instance, was hearing on the La Follette-Ballinger-Pinchot-Taft controversy in election, Eugene N. Foss, or any other live issue.

"Young man," said the former Governor, "don't be a June bug."

REPORT ON TEACHERS' PAY.

Brookline Selectmen to Discuss Petition at Next Meeting.

Selectman James H. Hobbs will report Wednesday night to the Brookline Selectmen the result of his investigation into the pay of the public school teachers for more pay. The teachers ask that the regulation adopted in 1906 be changed so as to pay the teachers as high as the highest paid in any town or city of Massachusetts outside of Boston by 1912. At the meeting of the Selectmen Wednesday, April 13, an informal discussion of what was given on the petition was asked by the school committee. The Selectmen declared that no further increase was possible this year.

HANSON WIDOWS IN WAR ABOUT HERRING

Hanson with all its beauty
Hanson with all its pride;
If it hadn't been for herring
Hanson would have died.
Songs of the Old Colony.

The coffee bean, the tea leaf, the spices of the torrid zone and the silkworm have less influence on the wealth of nations than the herring of the northern seas—An Old Authority.

PEMBROKE, April 23.—Just when the annual distribution of one hundred thousand herring to the householders of Pembroke and Hanson was at its height this forenoon, some by the Le Furgey mill at Herring Brook dallas Barker's rivers, a question that is likely to stir the social life of the two towns as it has never been stirred before dropped right down out of the Nowhere and for upwards of an hour made John Le Furgey, official herring catcher of the town of Pembroke, long for a sinecure on the bench of the United States Supreme Court, with such little questions as bother him as how to hang up the Tobacco Trust or douse the glim of Standard Oil.

"Why should a Pembroke woman be allowed one hundred herrings for nothing while a Hanson widow has to pay twenty cents for them?" she asked.

The widow of Hanson asked the question in the stern firm voice of a suffragette. John Le Furgey took off his hat, wiped his brow and scratched his head.

Another Portia Here.

Ed. Southworth, just in the very act of dipping the second extra Herring Brook herring pardon, Barker's river—again, with his net in midair.

"Why?" asked the Hanson widow.

"It's in the law," said John Le Furgey.

"Show it to me," said the Hanson woman.

"Lord bless ye!" said John Le Furgey. "I don't know the laws of Massachusetts with me when I'm catching herring for these ten days. You go down to the Selectmen; they'll tell you. I'm not enough."

Which simply spoke trouble for Calvin Weed, Asa Herring and Edgar Tinsley, not Southworth but "full committee" of the herring catchers.

There probably isn't anything else in all the United States quite like the Pembroke herring distribution. It goes back to the days when Christopher was catching of the Mattakeesett. It flourished in the day of Miles Standish and John Alden.

At this time of year the herring are rushing up from the ocean, through North River and Herring Brook to the fresh water ponds. Their purpose is to settle down in the ponds and spawn for a few months, bring up large families, and then take the young folks off to sea.

Gifts to the Widows.

Thousands of them never get any further towards a realization of the own yourown-home ambition than the mill of John Le Furgey, right here on Mattakeesett street.

For sixteen years John Le Furgey has been the big boss of the fish business of Pembroke. There he stands, when the herring are running, with a big net in his hand, prepared to scoop up 200 herring for Pembroke and every householder in the adjoining town of Hanson. Last year the catch amounted to two-fold. About 11,000 herring were caught for the fresh water ponds. Their purpose is to settle down in the ponds and spawn for a few months, bring up large families, and then take the young folks off to sea.

Then fell unconscious, was rushed to the hospital, where eight stitches were taken in his head. Then Mrs. Le Furgey clamored to be taken out of the dark pit. She was rushed in Hallon Hart drug store and had an earthquake and the efforts to revive her became more desperate.

In the chaos after Ambrosi struck Joyce and shoved Hinley drove a nail into Joyce's head. He also reported to the Cambridge Relief Hospital in an ambulance.

John J. Flynn of No. 1 Glen road, Roxbury, was also reported in the chaos, fell into the subway pit, and was conveyed to the hospital.

"If State Won't Do It, Let Private Enterprise Step in, Under Restrictions."

THE feeling is growing rapidly in Boston business circles that something tangible should be done and at once to develop the city's docks. If the State is not prepared to go at it then, business men say, let it be done with certain restrictions by private enterprise. The spirit of the city seems to be that the time has arrived for some one to do something besides talk.

This is the attitude of Bernard J. Rothwell, president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, and of General Samuel M. Felton, member of the Board of Harbor Commissioners, as expressed yesterday:

Henry M. Whitney, in backing up his bill, now before the Legislature, providing for harbor development, and in criticism of some statements made by Curtis Guild, Jr., regarding it, in a statement yesterday said:

"My attitude simply is this: That if the State is unwilling to make an appropriation for this development, and the railroads are willing to undertake the development, it seems to me that no unfair or illegal use is properly over to them under suitable restrictions and make a big thing."

Wants Someone to Act.

Mr. Whitney says that he takes no exception to Mr. Guild's proffers to have the work done by the State instead of the railroad, but he calls attention to the fact that nothing has been done during all the thirty years in which the matter has been up for discussion. As to the cost of developing Mr. Whitney recalls that there is half a million dollars appropriated already for that and he wants to know if the money be used for what it was intended.

President Rothwell had this to say:

"I think the State is now ready to proceed with the improvements, which are needed, then by all means let a responsible private corporation undertake to develop the dock system, with the proviso that at the end of a number of years the ownership of the docks shall revert to the State. Let the terms on which the private party is permitted to go ahead be liberal terms, for otherwise there will be little chance, and would deserve consideration.

Must Revert to State.

"What I do want to see incorporated in the new bill is a provision giving the State the right to resume ownership after a period of years has elapsed. The State must control these docks, and they must, in case of construction by private capital, revert to the State.

"You need not fear any bandbox because of this, Mr. Whitney, in his talk before the Chamber of Commerce, declared himself as willing to change his bill in details, and has said he is open to suggestions. There must not be perpetual private ownership in any case, and with one or two other minor changes I think the bill can become a great thing for Boston."

Commissioner Mansfield said:

"By all means the State should own the docks. That is the proper way. It would be far better for the city of Boston if the city owned and controlled the entire frontage system. As it is now, the State controls only Commonwealth pier, Fiedler's and a portion of the area of East Boston."

BOXER'S DEATH IS DUE TO BOUT, DECLARES EXAMINER

Dr. Leary Finds Max Landy's Demise Due to Cerebral Hemorrhage After Fight.

MEDICAL Examiner Leary yesterday afternoon performed an autopsy on the body of Max Landy, a bantamweight boxer, who died at his home, No. 28 Ingell street, Jamaica Plain, yesterday, following a six-round bout in Brockton with Joe O'Brien of Cambridge Friday night. He will submit his findings to the police.

"The man died from asphyxiation," said Medical Examiner Leary to a reporter. "He had a cerebral hemorrhage which caused incompetentness. He was lying across the bed in a peculiar manner which gave evidence that strangulation occured."

In response to a question as to whether Landy's death was caused by boxing with O'Brien, the Medical Examiner said:

"It was caused by boxing—that is, the cerebral hemorrhage."

Well Known as a Boxer.

Landy was nineteen years old. He was known as the "Little Fellow with the big punch." He won the New England bantam championship and had fought a number of times at the Armory and at other clubs in this city.

His opponent at Brockton, O'Brien, won the 105-pound national championship several years ago. O'Brien had been doing any scoring for more than a year until Friday night.

The bout was at the Union Athletic Club, and was refereed by Matt Flaherty. When told of Landy's death, Mr. Flaherty said:

"The bout was six rounds, but I did not think it would go that far. In fact, when I saw they got through they both leaped out of the ring, they were so tired. I was very much surprised after about each other, as fighters sometimes do, and walked away. I really supposed that the bout had ended, and can hardly believe that it was the last round. There was no foul, and no indication of such a fatal result, at least."

What Landy's Manager Says.

Joe Levins, Landy's manager, said last night:

"The bout was finished at 6 o'clock Friday night, and when we reached Dorchester Landy got off and went to his home. Then about at 12:15 o'clock, more than three hours after the bout was finished, I would appear that the bout had nothing to do with Landy's death. He was the best of sports to whom it was a good night."

As soon as O'Brien heard of the death of Landy he called at the American office and left his name and address. He is a Cambridge druggist. He told fully about the bout, and of the events before and after it.

From the American O'Brien and Comley went to the office of George McKellett, attorney, in the Pemberton Building. Mr. McKellett immediately communicated with the Roxbury and Cambridge police and notified them if O'Brien was wanted he would produce the little boxer at once.

O'Brien broke up as the result of Landy's death. Both boxers were intimate friends. They chummed together. Both were the best of sports.

DE COURCEY WON'T RUN.

Superior Court Judge Not Eager for Congress Nomination.

Friends of Judge Charles A. De Courcey of the Superior Court declare that he is not a candidate for Congress, in spite of the fact that some of the Democratic leaders believe that if he would consent to run he could be elected.

Chairman Macleod of the Democratic State committee and others have told that he would like to see get nominations for Congress from Judge Walker, but the proper nominations are made that in seven of the fourteen districts Democrats would pull through. Judge De Courcey is one of the men that Mr. Macleod has in mind.

But the judge likes the bench. He was in poor health when he was appointed to the bench and his health has improved. He will probably take a trip abroad, and he probably could not stand the hardship of a campaign.

NEW GAS BILL PLAN.

Company Perfectly Willing to Collect When Meter Is Read.

For the purpose of saving time and labor in collecting monthly bills, the Boston Consolidated Gas Company is making an experiment in delivery. Two men have encased the district the past week reading the meters and making out the bills, and have the authority to rend the notices, compute the amount due and collect. This will enable the use of pennies on a form similar to the street railway transfer, and, if the patron so chooses, collect what is due then. Under the plan, bills are rendered reports to the company. Within two days following the customers received their bills.

SURVEYOR'S JOB FOR PETERSON—UNLESS GRAVES GETS IT

Either Way, McCarthy's $5,000 Place Will Be Filled by a Good Machine Man.

FULL Surveyor of the Port at $5,000 per annum, Edward G. Graves of Boston or Joseph N. Peterson of Salem.

When they get around to it will Senators Lodge and Crane tell Jeremiah J. McCarthy's place with Mr. McCarthy's near friend, Graves or will they pick Peterson, the gentleman who did as much as any other to make impossible in 1908 the nomination of John N. Cole of Andover for Lieutenant Governor?

In either case, the "gang fellows" say, the Senators will be rewarding excellent service in the interests of the organization. Graves is a good machine man; so is Peterson.

Republicans could be found yesterday not of the "gang" variety who expressed the hope that Lodge and Crane might in this instance forget machine politics and flatly startle Massachusetts by making a non-politician of peculiar attainments a politician, decided that Massachusetts isn't going to be startled.

A Contrast of Types.

Graves and Peterson, as unlike as silk and Irish frieze, are machine politicians of the first rank. Graves has been a member of the Republican City Committee of Boston. Peterson has been three times Mayor of Salem. Not long ago Graves was chairman of the Republican State committee.

"Eddie" Graves, as man to man, is a fascinating fellow. He is a good mixer. He is also a hard fighter, but he knows how to do it with a suave courtesy. He has always been very successful at it. He is a good organizer.

Graves is quiet, genial, dapper, polished. Peterson is big, rough, jovial and roaring. If the Senators from Salem down the notice will be heard over several counties. If Graves is the Mr. Lodge and Mr. Crane friend of Mr. Graves will say he never wanted the place anyhow. Mr. Graves will smile. He is a good fighter, but he knows how to be a good loser. He has always been "loyal," McCarthy, Republicans said yesterday, would have required no more than further remain to turn his office over to Graves. The men were said to be friendly candidates, more than friendly candidates, for the Republican City Committee. McCarthy, who has been in Brookline, has a "small" residence in Wards 3, 4, 5 and 6, Chelsea.

A Little McCarthy History.

Graves, although he had been chairman of the city machine, was known in Ward 3, Roxbury, of Boston, for re-election to the Committee. The turn-down was a shock to the city organization, the rest leaders being Chairman Macleod, Senator Edwin U. Curtis and former Senator Charles H. Innes.

Immediately thereafter Mr. George Bruce Morrison, a lawyer who had been the primary agent to Surveyor of the Port Jeremiah J. Murphy, called on Mr. Graves and tendered him the position of deputy surveyor. Mr. Graves declined. Then Graves was offered the "stranger" to the City Committee as any man in Boston could be. His chairmanship was left aside. "Jerry" McCarthy was simply out.

"Joe" Peterson can fall, when he puts the third speed on. Mr. Peterson influences practically whole slate of Democratic delegates to the Democratic National Convention. He helped to defeat Congressman Gillett in Hampden County. Then he bought a milk-route truck and started around the Salem streets. So that, all told, what with the general public acquaintance and friendships, the United States Senators have a job on their hands.

TAFTS AT BEVERLY JUNE 5.

President Due to Arrive Three Weeks Later.

BEVERLY, April 23.—Unless there is an unexpected change in the program President Taft will make here early in June, his second Summer stay in the Evans cottage at Burgess Point will be short. Although his arrival is only seven weeks distant, a force of carpenters and caretakers are at the cottage, putting everything in order for the President at the close of his visit last Summer. Mrs. Taft will not be with the President's household, will arrive about June 15, when the President's visit is over, but the President will be unable to come to Burgess Point until three weeks later.

These include the Cambridge and Beacon Hill subways upon which work is now progressing, the Riverbank subway and a tunnel between Park street and the South Station, the East Cambridge branch extensions from the North Station to Lechmere point, and the elevated extension from Sullivan square to Malden center, Malden.

The largest of these improvements is the tunnel and subway from Park street to Harvard square, Cambridge. In reality a continuous subway three and a sixteenth sections. The tunnel under Beacon street, a half mile in length, is being constructed by the Boston Transit Commission, to be leased by the Boston Elevated Company. The tunnel will cost $2,000,000.

The tunnel will run to the Boston side of the Cambridge bridge, better known as the West Boston bridge. The Boston Elevated Company bore a substantial part of the cost of constructing this bridge a few years ago, and the structure was made strong enough to carry heavy elevated trains. When the Beacon Hill tunnel and the Cambridge subway are completed the bridge can be used for the purpose originally contemplated, as the connecting link between the two systems.

SIX-HOUR SHOCKS JAR ATLANTIC CITY

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., April 23.—A series of earthquake shocks starting at 1 o'clock A. M. and lasting about six hours were distinctly felt in this vicinity today. Although the shocks were slight they caused many people to run from windows to parties and in some cases injured persons were reported accompanied them.

The first shock was generally attributed to an explosion of gas and a number of there were others. Some followed by three was much uneasiness. Men on watch at the Absecon Lighthouse noted and felt the shocks, that rattled glasses in the tables and bureaus. The only damage to chimneys, caused by the rumbling, became frightened.

There is no seismograph here and therefore no official record of the shocks were taken, but Weather Observer Jenkins has made an official report of the shocks.

POLITICIANS DODGE BIG PAYING JOBS

Mayor Says He Offered to Place Any Expert They Named; Nobody Came.

Mayor Fitzgerald made the surprising announcement last evening that he had voluntarily suggested to a number of political politicians that they find him a competent recognized expert on engineering and he would at once appoint him superintendent of streets and that the politicians failed to produce a single candidate.

"I wanted a man who could bring to the department a knowledge both technical and practical of engineering, one who was capable of handling its problems and combined with that ability, executive experience. I think I have found such a man in Louis K. Rourke. One of the best recommendations that he could be given from an impartial standpoint is that he did not know he was even considered until I tendered him the appointment. I am not acquainted with him personally," said the Mayor.

"It is a surprising thing but it is nevertheless true that there was only one applicant for this position and not a single applicant for the position of Fire Commissioner. Neither did a politician or an individual urge the appointment of any one as Fire Commissioner. The only pressure brought to bear upon me was for the present commissioner. Frederick J. McGrath, at present surveyor of the port, and a Republican, was the choice.

Superintendent of Streets Emerson, who will be replaced, will probably remain in the city service.

Mayor Fitzgerald believes that he is the engineer who should handle the problem of extending and improving the sewerage system of the city, which involves the expenditure of about $1,000,000 annually. His salary would probably be fixed at about $5,000. In addition to this, Emerson will accept the offer of the Finance Commission to be consulting engineer on the expert work of investigating for this work he will probably be compensated by fees.

ACTORS CELEBRATE BARD'S BIRTHDAY

New Theatre Players Present "Winter's Tale" Upon Elizabethan Stage.

It was a case of Shakespeare without scenery at the Shubert last evening, when tribute was paid to the memory of the immortal Willim by the New Theatre company. "The Winter's Tale" was given in Shakespeare's own way, upon an Elizabethan stage, and what the audience missed in the way of scenic splendor was made up in the beauty of the performance.

This method of presenting the comedy made it possible to give the play without unnecessarily cutting its scenes, for the performance was played continuously. This tribute of the New Theatre company was probably the only elaborate manifestation in the city during yesterday was the anniversary of Shakespeare's birth.

In "The Winter's Tale" the company was well assigned. Henry Kolker gave a capital interpretation of Leontes, and Miss Edith Wynne Matthison, who had appeared previously only in "Sister Beatrice," renewed her acquaintance with the audience as Hermione, to which she brought some of the best acting of the week. Her reading was a delight and the impression of her work gathered by the audience brought sincere admiration. Miss Leah Bateman Hunter, as Perdita, and Miss Dorothy Hoglins, as Paulina, added much to the performance by their flawless acting.

In sharp contrast to the sceneryless stage of the evening, the performance of "Twelfth Night" in the evening took first rank among the previous Shakespearian productions in Hoss city by reason of its matchless stage splendor. No scenic production of the season has previously made beauty in its equipment, and the charming evening met with the fullest response. The most considerable in the cast were A. E. Anson, who played Feabo with rich humor; Miss Annie Russell who gave Viola a charm that marked it as her best work of the engagement, and Miss Bateman Hunter, who made Olivia a woman of many attractive qualities. Oswald Yorke's Malvolio was a splendid portrayal of the wretched steward.

M'CARTHY RAN WITH HAND TUB IN OLD DAYS

WHEN Jeremiah J. McCarthy of Albion place, Charlestown, strolls down into bristol street some one morning next month to say "howdy ?" and "the top o' the morning !" to General Samuel D. Parker of Beacon street, and relieve Commissioner Barker of his duties as honorary colonel of a fire fighter, no garden at eating smoke, who takes charge of the Boston Fire Department and its two men.

Long ago Jerry McCarthy was tested. Long ago Jerry McCarthy ran with the machine in the days of hand tubs. He was in the fire service before the department owned a horse. He hiked with the tub when firemen were firemen for fun and glory. He wore red shirt and helmet when firemen were rugged, and when young men fought for a place in the firehouse again as they fight today to go to the House of Representatives.

Much as politicians may favor Fire Commissioner Barker, they favor Jerry more. It announced that he had chosen Jerry to be the Port McCarthy, regardless, for Fire Commissioner, survivors of the volunteer fire companies have organized a movement that "Mac" was coming into his own.

They were not successful in the end yet in Charlestown said, "who ran with the machine" was Jerry — and Jerry was. They were irregulars for the love of it. The experiences of those days with the administrative ability developed during thirty years in the federal service, ought to mean that Commissioner Mercy could do well, in the department of Bacon at its present [illegible] Dudley, Dover and Warren.

The volunteers of earlier days gray-headed, those of the middle years and the regulars of the modern department, are united in the belief that McCarthy will make good.

The volunteers say Jerry McCarthy proved his mettle on a Winter night in December 78, they wouldn't be sure which, as a member of the Bunker Hill Hose Company at $225 a year.

Jerry was a younger man, of to-day, said that when they feel like taking the measure of Commissioner Mercy they will have to recall his younger brother, Patrick J. McCarthy, killed on a fire ladder in the North End one Sunday morning some nine or ten years ago.

Narrow Escape From Death.

The new Commissioner's escape from death back in the '70's is said to have been miraculous. The fire was in the Holmes furniture factory, on Bristol street, Charlestown. McCarthy, with Foreman George M. Dyer, ought to say that "Charley" Furlong, as the old-timers recalled it yesterday, had run the hose into a narrow passageway between the Holmes building and the Chisholm mowers factory. Blind to their danger the men kept up the fight until the wall toppled over on them, crushing them with its bricks. Furlong's leg was broken. The rest were bruised and pounded.

Jerry McCarthy, leading a Federal place in the fight for the chief's office, and one of the most important of municipal departments, is a genuine Charlestowner.

"Although," the new commissioner said last night when it was learned that Jerry was really Charlestown, and not a part of Boston. Our home was in Middlesex street, in the Charlestown Neck district, out toward Everett. My father was a laborer. There were ten children, only two of them born in Charlestown. I attended the Bunker Hill school as a boy. Then I left school and went to work.

"One of my earliest places, I remember, was with Haley, Morse & Boyden, the big furniture house of that day in Washington street just below Boylston street. I used to pass home pretty early in the morning, and at 6.30 in the morning was generally in Washington street. I seldom rode even. The fare was 6 cents. If I took it away with me in the morning, I carried it home to mother at night.

"When I was a little fellow it was the ambition of every boy in Charlestown to be a fireman. I had three ambitions. I wanted to be a fireman, I wanted to be a politician, and I wanted to be a musician. I ought to be happy, though I never got on with my music.

"At that time our fire engines were hand tubs. We followed the machine to fires. We would stand before the open door of a fire house for hours at a time. Do you remember—but, of course, you don't—the pictures on the walls, representing firemen in The Life of a Fireman? There were other decorations, colored prints of the New York Volunteer Department, and so on. My, my! There is nothing in the Art Museum quite like them! When the red shirts turned out on parade we were crazy with delight. We knew the names of the firemen and the names of the tubs, quite as the lads of to-day, I suppose, know the names and records of the ball players.

"Our my way we were divided in our allegiance between Bunker Hill No. 2 and Hancock Engine No. 3. Bunker Hill No. 2 was quartered on the Neck. Hancock Engine was stationed at Reed's Corner, now Hancock square.

"At the beginning, of course, I had to be a volunteer. For a while I was not a member of the department in name but I was in fact. In plain English I was "just hanging around" the fire house. While I was trying my turn to be called in. Finally I was elected a member of the Washington Hose Company, on Harvard Hill, near City square. That was the starting point of the town, where, along about '68, Moses Kimball, who made $100,000 a year out of the Waverly Magazine, put up the Waverly Hotel at a cost of maybe half a million.

"The volunteer days were happy. The volunteers had to 'show for the company they were attached to, for that matter, to be sure that that company was the best in its section. They had to be ready to say so and to fight anybody who took exceptions. After the fire there was always lobster suppers and crackers and cheese at the fire house. The volunteer was as good as the regular.

"And I want you to know that when I was elected to the Washington in 1870, there wasn't a prouder boy in old Charlestown. An eighteen year old.

ROCKEFELLER BILL FAILS.

Foundation Aims to Dodge Tax Collector, Says Heyburn.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—The opposition in the Senate to the Rockefeller foundation is so persistent that friends have abandoned hope of passing it at this session. The chief opponent is Senator Heyburn of Idaho. Silver J. Murphy of New York, Mr. Rockefeller's representative, recently had an interview with Mr. Heyburn, but was unable to convert him. The Idaho senator holds that the creation of this great fund under the federal charter will operate to remove the Rockefeller fortune from the power of the tax collector. It is understood that Rockefeller interests will apply to one of the states for a charter on practically the same lines.

INDICTED AS SLAYERS.

Two Mysterious Features in Strange Case in Maine.

BELFAST, Me., April 23.—The Grand Jury to-day brought in indictments against Ira Grady, a Unity blacksmith, and Sidney Bennett, of Belfast, charging them with murder. They are accused of stabbing Harriet French Thomas to death on February 21.

The greatest mystery has surrounded the death of Mrs. Thomas. The knife blade penetrated the heart. Both Grady and Bennett deny that they are guilty. At the same time each of the men denies that the other was the murderer, and is expected that the trial will begin in the Supreme Court next Monday.

Cold Stops Aviator's Flight.

LONDON, April 23.—Graham White, the English aviator, who started at 5:10 a. m. to-day on a biplane flight from Wormwood Scrubs, London, for Manchester, in an attempt to win the prize of $50,000 offered by a morning newspaper, had accomplished more than half of the journey when compelled to descend on account of the intense cold.

SCORES INJURED IN HEAD-ON COLLISION

FOND DU LAC, Wis., April 23.—Two passenger trains on the Chicago & North western road met head on in front of the passenger depot at Oakfield, a suburban town, seven miles south of here to-day.

Scores of people were more or less injured, four employes of the Northwestern road seriously. They are: H. C. Klingler mail clerk, Chicago; shoulder and hip fractured; Stephen Buck, fireman, Fond du Lac, ribs fractured, internal injuries; M. A. Crowley, Janesville, engineer of Northbound train, back and hip injured; Stephen Gille, Fond du Lac, fireman, south-bound train, leg broken and scalded by steam.

The wreck caught fire, but was extinguished by the local fire department. Kingsley, the mail clerk, had to be chopped from the burning train. The wreck was caused by a heavy blizzard which was raging at the time.

HEADS "KICKERS" BUREAU.

Timothy A. Mooney Selected as Chief of New Work.

Timothy A. Mooney, employed in the Street Commissioner's office, will be the chief of the new bureau of information and complaints which the Mayor plans to establish at City Hall within the next fortnight. Mooney has been connected with city affairs for about twenty-five years, most of the time in the City Messenger's department. In addition to the chief the "kickers" bureau will have the services of a stenographer and messenger. There are a number of applicants for these positions.

BRITISH MINISTER LAUDS OUR FREEDOM

Rev. Dr. John Hunter, the leading Congregationalist minister, of Great Britain, is in Boston, the guest of the Universalists of this city. He is a liberal preacher in his own country, and has many friends among the Congregationalists of this country because of his liberal tendencies.

Some of the Boston Universalists in visiting Scotland last year were greatly attracted to his interpretation of the doctrines of the Bible, saw in them more of their own teachings, and invited him to come to this country and make a series of addresses. He will speak to-morrow noon at a meeting of the ministers in the Columbus Avenue Universalist Church.

Rev. Dr. George A. Gordon, pastor of the old South Church, will give the welcome for the liberal wing of the Congregational church, and President Hamilton of Tufts College will represent the Universalists.

Dr. Gordon of your city has done an admirable work in the line of emphasizing the essentials of Christianity, "he said." His book on 'Religion and Miracles' is along the same lines that Edward and John Caird have pursued in our own country. Such men as Dr. Gordon keep the church from dying from dry rot.

"Religion is simple and enters into the life and achievements of mankind to-day.

Enjoy Your Meals

By Simply Eating A Little Pleasant Tablet After Each of Them.

A Tablet Digests A Meal. Trial Package Free.

When digestion is perfect the fluids necessary to this process come naturally to the aid of the stomach. They are of right proportion and do their work speedily and well. When indigestion and dyspepsia are prevalent these same juices come slowly if at all, are weak and insufficient or are filled with strong acids and bad fluids.

When such a condition exists each meal is a hardship upon the digestive organs. The meal should strengthen the juices, but on the contrary it weakens them, so that man by the very act of eating causes conditions to arise which of themselves bring him pain and loathing for the next meal.

By eating one of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets you mix the tablet with your saliva and it goes into your stomach a strong, vigorous fluid, many times more powerful than the natural digestive juices. These tablets are made up from natural vegetable and fruit essences and are composed from Hydrastic, Golden Seal, Lactose, Pepsin, Aseptic Pepsin and Jamaica Ginger. There is the formula and one grain or it will digest 3,000 grains of food in any stomach. Besides digesting the food it will give the blood the power to enrich the digestive fluids so after a time nature will take care of itself. Though you have no stomach trouble one of these tablets after each meal is a powerful assistance to nature and is an excellent habit to make.

WATER METERS ARE LEADING TOWARD ARID HOMES

Awful Avalanche of Bills Deluge the Housewives and Bring New Terrors.

But if he had been a Boston property owner and had seen his first quarter's water bill under the new water meter system, he would have howled: "Water, water in the pipe, and every drop is metered."

THE water department of the city of Boston has sent out its first quarterly bills for 1910, under the new meter system, and also immediate [illegible] quantity of land confiscated from careless landlords.

The landlords say that the increase of water rates [illegible] renting rates [illegible] and houses.

E. Gavin owns the properties at Nos. 1038 40-42 Harrison avenue.

His water tax for 1910 for Nos. 1040-42 was $41.

His water tax for No. 1042 alone for the first quarter of 1910 under system is $18.50—which is $4.50 more than he formerly paid for water for 1040 and 1042 [illegible].

JEWS WORLD OVER OBSERVE PASSOVER

Eight Days' Holiday Marked by Abstinence from All Leavened Foods.

Beginning at sunset last evening the Jewish people all over the world began their observance of the Passover celebration and will observe it for eight days to come.

The Passover is one of the most important holidays of the Jewish calendar. It marks the anniversary of the exodus of the children of Israel from Egypt and their deliverance from bondage under the Pharaohs.

The holiday has been celebrated from time immemorial and is marked by abstinence from all leavened foods, such as breads, cakes, pastry and candles. During the week of the Passover a special prepared bread in shape very similar to hot cross buns, made from flour without leavening, is used. These are called "Matzos."

The "Seder" last night marked the beginning of the celebration. It will be repeated tonight and also the eighth or last night. The orthodox Jews keep all seven nights, while the Reformed Jews observe but the first night.

The dishes used during the Passover are kept carefully from year to year and are not used at any other time.

There are also services in the synagogues, but the "Seder" at home is the most important and most impressive. The head of the family reads from the "Haggadah" the story of the deliverance from Egypt and the subsequent journey of the Israelites through the Red Sea and the Wilderness.

The table is decorated with several dishes. The dish will the meals in commemoration of the sacrifice which the Israelites made before leaving Egypt, the bones in remembrance of their bitter tasks in the construction of the latter Pharaohs; they suffered in their bondage, the bone of a roasted young lamb, if the lamb is not eaten whole, is placed on the door lintels of all the Israelite houses to avert harm for the night, struck down every first born child of the Egyptians.

The entire evening will be devoted to religious exercises, reading of old and impressive prayers and songs. The orchestra of Post No. 88, G. A. R. Hall, Washington street, Auburndale, will furnish music. Among those who will be present are Postmaster North, President of the Massachusetts Senate, and Representative Frederick H. Wilson.

BEARD AND BOARD BILL 11 YEARS OLD

DOVER, N. H., April 23.—Rather than pay a judgment rendered against him for $1,500, Alfred W. Jones has remained in the State Prison for eleven years. He is there to stay eleven years more, if lived as long from his cell, as he has. He declares he will die there.

It may be regarded as queer that in free America one may be imprisoned for debt. But this eccentric man has refused to take the poor debtor's oath, even if he were allowed to do so because he says that would be tantamount to an acknowledgement of a debt.

There is a mystery connected with the case as to whether Jones actually owed the money he refused to pay. Some say that he did, and others that he did not. Among those who declare he did not are Arthur A. Crippa, a well known lawyer, and Edward Berry, a retired cotton manufacturer, both of this city. Both recently refused to make affidavits to the effect that Jones did not owe the money. Both refused to take the oath to avoid freeing Jones.

Now the old man says he has had a vision and is convinced that he will die in prison. He has made all preparations for his burial and has even selected the spot where he wants to be laid. He says he is ready to quit this world of sin and trouble.

CAMERON TELLS HOW HE TRAINED FOR AND WON THE MARATHON

Winner of B. A. A. Twenty-five Mile Race Lays Down Sensible Rules Which Should Help Those Who Contemplate Taking Up Long Distance Running.

"It pays to be a successful Marathon runner eat meal."

The above advice of Fred S. Cameron of Amherst, Nova Scotia, the 116 pound runner who won the classic twenty-five-mile Marathon run from Ashland to Boston Patriots' Day although most athletes are opposed to meat eating. Cameron advocates meat eating on the ground that it makes energy. Although he never donned a running shoe until eleven months ago, Cameron is to-day considered one of the best runners in North America. He expects to come back to Boston next year and win the Marathon again.

He tells in to-day's Sunday American how he trains, how he happened to get into the running game, what he thinks of running as a sport and what he hopes to do in the future. He also tells how he runs and what he avoids while running. Cameron is twenty-three years old and is the son of an Advocate, Nova Scotia, farmer. Here is his story:

By FRED S. CAMERON.

RUNNING [illegible] sport [illegible] I [illegible] it does not hurt [illegible] [illegible] things which go to make a successful runner and the chief thing in proper training. While training I diet and do not overeat. I eat meat while training. Although many athletes are opposed to meat eating, I find it helps me. In my opinion meat eating is the best long distance [illegible] gives them energy to keep up the pace.

The first long distance event in which I entered was last May at Amherst, N. S. At the time I was working on a farm and I went into the race without proper training and chiefly out of curiosity and for experience. It was a five-mile event on an outdoor track. I got second place. The winner of the race was Ernest Sterling of St. John, N. B. He won by about ten feet.

At that time I was not interested in sport of running, but had no idea of keeping it up.

Thomas T. Trenholm, who is my trainer, was the starter of that first race in which I ran. He noticed my running and became interested in me, with the result that I have blossomed into a full-fledged distance runner.

After that first race he examined me and finally took hold of me, and I've been running ever since.

Giants Rally and Win.

NEW YORK, April 23.—The Giants beat the Dodgers in a great ninth inning rally by a score of 5 to 4. The Giants were two to the bad when they went to bat in the last session. Scott suffered into McMillan's hands. Bridwell drew an error to first. Devlin was hit by a pitched ball. McMillan fumbled Merkle's easy grounder and the bases were full. The excitement was intense at this stage. Meyers dashed against the left field bleachers, scoring Bridwell and Devlin. Merkle went to third on the hit. Fletcher reached the ball from the left field bleachers scoring Merkle. It only counted for a sing.e, but it sent all the Giants wild under ordinary circumstances. The score:

BOSTON FIRM GIVES LARGEST CAR ORDER

Waite-Robbins Company Buys Record Number of Babcock Electrics.

Believing most thoroughly in the future of the electric vehicle in the city of Boston the Waite Robbins Motor Company of No. 540 Boylston street have placed with the Babcock Company the largest individual order for electrics that has ever been received by a manufacturer. It is said that the order is for more cars than have been used or sold in this city during the past seven years.

This is certainly an indication that this new firm proposes to do its utmost to make more popular the electric, and that it has come into Boston with the determination to succeed.

The new company consists of H. S. Waite of Columbus, O., who has had long and successful business experience in the West and F. H. Robbins, who for years was a prominent figure in the Chicago motor industry, so that both gentlemen are well equipped by experience as well as financial backing to conduct a high-class, successful business in any city.

The firm is to be the New England distributors for the full line of Babcock electrics and Lozier gasoline cars, which are of world-wide reputation for their high grade of workmanship and ability.

The Babcock Line of electrics is one of the best known in the country. It being the next car to come into public favor after the Stoddard-Dayton, and a car that is guaranteed to run a distance of 80 miles without requiring the services of the recharging plant. It is equipped with the latest type of Exide battery, which is guaranteed for 36 months. In addition to this it is entitled to stand above all other batteries in that through care of a Babcock owner.

The Boston agency will establish salesrooms and garage at the Berkeley Hotel and it is now being erected in a most convenient part of the city, and will be ready for occupancy about May 1. The Babcock line will be on display at the Boston Automobile Show in March, and the Waite-Robbins Company will be ready to make deliveries of the Babcock electrics to the purchasers at that time.

ABBOTT-DETROITS HERE.

New Vehicles Scientifically Built and Lack No Essential Detail.

The first of the large shipment of Abbott-Detroits received during the past week by the Abbott-Detroit Boston Co. shows a thoroughness of detail and construction that is really remarkable in a car selling at such a moderate price. The car is in every sense a motor vehicle, admirably constructed, along a lentile and well designed lines, having a motor of something like 25 horsepower and having not a single detail that will in any way contribute to a greater efficiency of a motor vehicle. There is no waste about the car every refinement of detail and scientific proportions of weight to power, coupled with economy of operation and low keep cost. It is thoroughly equipped, having both gas and acetylene head and tail light. The builders are in the belief that they have produced a car and one strong in every part to insure durability and yet by the use of special materials have held it down to a minimum weight to insure economy in fuel and tires.

MOTOR CARS FASTEST MEANS OF TRAVEL

An analysis of the wonderful speed records made by Harvey Oldfield at Los Angeles and Daytona again shows the supremacy of the motor car as a speed agent over all other means of fast travel, including automobiles flying machines and steam locomotives. Not content with setting a new world's mark for a straight away mile in 25 11 seconds at Daytona, Oldfield made for the world's track record by covering the distance in 26.22 at the Los Angeles motordrome. The former record means a speed of 137.7 miles per hour or 201.5 feet per second, while Oldfield's time figures speed of 142.8 miles per hour or 209.5 feet per second. Fifty years ago the would have considered the fastest train 7 hours 28 minutes making the 250 miles between Boston and Albany, which Oldfield covered in 1 hour 45 minutes, a record which Chalmers Detroit took recently in 1 hour 48 minutes, a record which Chalmers Detroit took recently in 1 hour 48 minutes, a record which Chalmers Detroit took recently in 1 hour 48

LIFE OF AUTO TIRE DEPENDS UPON INFLATION

Diamond Company's Manager Says Users Make Mistake in Using Too Little Air.

That mileage cost will ultimately be the measure of tire values, and for the very reason that tire equipment will assume an important factor in the accepted income on the upkeep cost of a car, is the belief of the Diamond Rubber Company. Funny Things About Boston Will Be Found Every Week In This Section of the Sunday American

BEST STORIES TOLD IN BOSTON LAST WEEK

This Is An "If" Story.

By Mayor John F. Fitzgerald.

On the occasion of the recent visit of the Manhattan Grand Opera Company, District Attorney Pelletier and myself invited John McCormack the noted Irish tenor, to take an automobile ride through the Boston [illegible].

It was a beautiful day and while we were speeding down the Fenway, the chauffeur opened up a notch or two just to show what his car could do. We had been humming along for about two minutes when we heard quite a commotion in the rear. It was an automobile policeman, and he held up his hand for us to stop.

When he came up alongside of the car, he recognized the district attorney, and, I think, myself. "We were not overspeeding, were we, officer?" I said. "Oh, no," replied the officer. "You were just going along pretty fast and I thought I would warn you before you went the limit."

We started up again and after a minute or two McCormack remarked: "I was just thinking, John. They say you're a pretty good mayor, but you're an awful press agent. If we'd only been pinched!"

He Didn't Mean It.

By Thomas Lavelle, Assistant District Attorney.

I do not believe in being too harsh, judging people entirely by the exact words they use in expressing themselves. The average citizen often uses phrases that are ambiguous.

And that reminds me of the minister out in the ——— Street Baptist Church in Roxbury. He had made a successful appeal for collections for the church debt fund. Incidentally he had double cause for joy, as his wife presented him with a bouncing ten pound boy.

"Oh Lord, we thank Thee for the little success Thou hast given us."

Smiles flitted over the faces of the congregation who were aware of the advent of the baby the previous week.

He Looked All In.

By Max Fischacher, the Veteran Attorney.

I AM troubled with the bane of all high livers—dyspepsia. Let me say that my malady is not caused by high living, however. To get temporary relief I generally carry a small vial of saccharine tablets.

About two weeks ago I was at the Sullivan Square terminal, and feeling the need of one of my tablets I prepared to take one.

"Let me have a glass of Hilda water," I said to the girl behind the soda water fountain.

"We haven't got Hilda but I can give you plain water," she said severely. I took the substitute, reached into my pocket and drew out my tablets.

"My Gawd, mister," the girl exclaimed. "If you're goin' to commit suicide, don't do it here." I relieved her suspense by showing her the label on the bottle.

Too Much Is Plenty.

By Councilor Walter Ballantyne, President of the City Council.

He has no sympathy for the gentlemen of the cloth who depart from the word of the Holy Book to discuss more worldly things.

Then remind him, he says, of a certain Scotch dominie who, during a protracted dry spell, preached long and earnestly of the terrible devastation and suffering that the drouth was causing, and prayed devotedly for rain.

The next night the rain fell in torrents, so much so that it occasioned great damage. One of the good old ladies of the parish, observing the havoc of the storm, remarked:

"Dat is just like our minister. He always overdoes everything he undertakes."

She'd Have To Go Some.

By Ex-Representative Thomas J. Fay, Mayor Fitzgerald's Legislative Agent.

A man 35 years old has a daughter aged 5. He's seven times as old as she. Five years later, she's ten and he's 40. Now he's four times as old as she. After five years more, he's 45 and she's 15.

Now he's three times as old as she is. After another 15 years, he's 60 and she's 30. Now he's only twice as old as she. The question is, how long would it be before they would both be the same age.

He got the book after that one.

Well, There's Some Harmony!

By William (Bill) Leahy, Press Agent for American Music Hall.

YES, we have trials and tribulations that would drive a man crazy, but for the fact that many members of the "profesh" greet us every morning with some funny story to cheer our hearts. That fellow Joe Welch always is doing the good samaritan act to mankind with his yarns. I was feeling blue when I ran across Joe, Tuesday morning, and I told him so.

"Cheer up," said Joe. "You remember the husband and wife that never agreed? They lived down on a river road in the Ohio Valley. The wife played a melodeon, more or less. The river this Spring overflowed its banks and the husband was driven from the old homestead. Despite the fact that the couple had never agreed, they floated down stream, the wife accompanying the husband on the melodeon."

"Also speaking about marital troubles. There was a couple living over in Arlington whose marital disputes were proverbial. In fact they never could get along together. One day recently, there was a gas explosion in their kitchen and boys were blown out the window. Sad, but its a fact that the neighbors afterward declared it was the first time they ever knew them to be together."

THINGS POLICEMEN SAY AND DO

Drew the Line.

By a Desk Sergeant.

PATROLMEN who make love to servant girls on their beats are taking big chances.

A cop I once knew got very sweet on a pretty little nursemaid who was employed in a house on his beat. So badly was he smitten that instead of patrolling his post he used to spend the greater part of his tour of duty in the basement of his sweetheart's employer's house.

One night while he was thus billing and cooing, he glanced through the basement window and saw a tall, distinguished looking gentleman ascending the front stoop.

"What's the matter?" inquired the girl, observing that he had turned pale; "you seem to be scared about something."

"How often does that fellow come here?" he gasped.

"How often?" she answered, in a tone of great surprise. "Why, all the time. He lives here. That is the master of the house."

"Gee whiz!" exclaimed the cop and hurried out into the night.

That tall, distinguished looking gentleman was the Police Commissioner. The cop didn't call at that house any more after that.

Rats! Rats!

By Inspector George Pinkerton, Police Headquarters.

TWENTY years ago, when I was patrolling a beat in the West End, I had what was then called "London bridge" for a route. During the Summer months groups of colored men and women used to gather on the sidewalks as early as 3 o'clock in the morning and start to tell stories and sing Southern songs.

Several complaints were made to the station house, and I was notified to put a stop to the concerts.

The next night that I was on duty I told the crowd on the sidewalk that if they didn't stop the racket I would arrest them.

"Why don't you stay in the house where you belong?" I asked.

"Well like to, Mr. Pinkerton," one old fellow replied, "but the rats are so thick that they chase us into the street and if we didn't sing they would follow us out here."

Temperance! Yes?

By the Police Reporter.

THERE are few spots on this earth which the patrolman on the beat out in my house has not visited, and he has had more amazing adventures than befall the Sailor of London.

Once when he was serving before the mast he was wrecked on a tropical island, where he made the acquaintance of a wonderful species of grapes which, he says, he would like to see imported into this country.

"These grapes," says he, "are very quick to go to work. The natives eat their fill of them and then stretch themselves out in the sun and go to sleep.

"The hot rays of the tropical sun beat down upon their stomachs they don't wear any clothes to speak of in that part of the world) and pretty soon the grapes begin to ferment. When the natives wake up they are as drunk as they can stand on their feet.

"Now, what's the matter with bringing these grapes to Boston and feeding them to the native here? It would be the most satisfactory scheme conceivable for solving the Sunday liquor question. All the talk about the liquor dealers having protection money to the cops would be at an end then. There wouldn't be any more need for saloons at all.

Fine Old Ship.

By Inspector Albert Douglas, Police Headquarters.

ABOUT twelve years ago I was sent down to meet the Deer Island boat to re-arrest an old negro who had just completed a term at the House of Correction. He had been in jail for nearly a year and was anxious to learn all about the news that had happened. It was just at the time that the Spanish-American war was at its height.

"What is the latest news, Mr Officer?" he asked me.

"Well, Admiral Dewey has captured Manila," I replied.

"And Colonel Roosevelt has taken San Juan hill."

"We sure have a great army. Anything else, Mr. Officer?"

His Debt.

By a Traffic Officer.

IF two drunken Italians had not quarrelled in a North End wine room, two years ago, one patrolman I know of would not be a happy married man to-day.

The Italians, after a war of words, let fly at each other with 38-caliber guns, and both combatants were seriously wounded and taken to the hospital in the same ambulance.

For several weeks the wounded men remained in the hospital, and as both were charged with a felony a patrolman was detailed to stand guard over them in the ward.

This soft snap fell to this particular copper, and while at the hospital he divided his time between watching his prisoners and paying compliments to the pretty young woman who presided over the telephone switchboard.

By the time the Italians were ready to leave the hospital he had fallen head over heels in love with the fair telephone operator and had mustered up enough courage to ask her to be his wife.

Now there's a young sometime copper to bless the union and every time the old man dandles the new arrival on his knee he gives three cheers for those two drunken Italians who had made his romance possible.

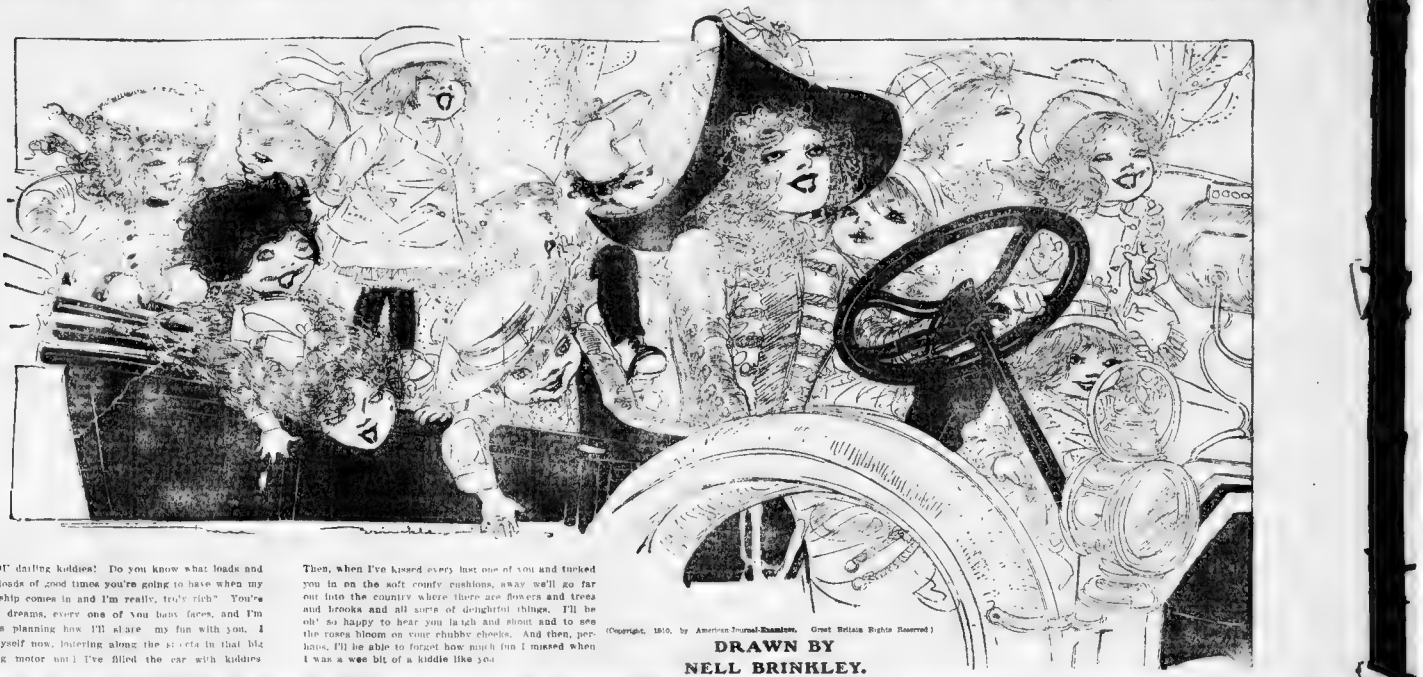
"How I Would Make the Kiddies Happy If I Were Very Rich."



YOU' darling kiddies! Do you know what loads and loads of good times you're going to have when my ship comes in and I'm really, truly rich? You're in my dreams, every one of you bad faces, and I'm always planning how I'll share my fun with you. I see myself now, loitering along the streets in that big purring motor until I've filled the car with kiddies

Then, when I've kissed every last one of you and tucked you in on the soft comfy cushions, away we'll go far out into the country where there are flowers and trees and brooks and all sorts of delightful things. I'll be oh! so happy to hear you laugh and shout and to see the roses bloom on your chubby cheeks. And then, perhaps, I'll be able to forget how much fun I missed when I was a wee bit of a kiddie like you

MEGAPHONE MAN—Wouldn't think he was 69 years old, to look at him, would you? Now—

PRETTY GIRL—Indeed I would not, but when a man looks so [illegible] and healthy and kindly as he does you don't mind about his age. He is really and truly a Mayor?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Probably not a really truly one. His position as Superintendent of the Market, but he has held the place thirty-three years and his word is law down here. He even has a staff of four policemen there, on our left, is Faneuil Hall.

SMALL BOY (from Pontiac, Mich.)—The Cradle of Liberty!

LADY PRESIDENT OF THE ALGA LITERARY UNION (Keokuk, Ia.)—Now tell us all about where it gets its name. Who was this Faneuil?

RANISH YOU TH (from Springfield) [illegible] morning. I got [illegible] and it's hurt to beat the cats.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Just as the matter may be, of course, I don't [illegible] matter much—it's just a question.

PRETTY GIRL—We want to hear it.

MEGAPHONE MAN—I don't want to be knocking a guy that's been dead near 200 years, but that Peter Faneuil chap did his brother dirt and he didn't prosper none on it. Their uncle, Andrew Faneuil, was the richest merchant in old Boston [illegible] like he hated the women, and

LADY OF INCREASIN AGE—[illegible]

MEGAPHONE MAN—Maybe he [illegible] However, Andrew had no nephews under his wing. [illegible] Peter, [illegible] knowing the old gentleman was [illegible] Peter to Provost [illegible] Marshal [illegible] decked to him the office [illegible] on the Q. T. [illegible] ding who, because [illegible] done. I guess for two cents [illegible] town off. Being driven [illegible] sheets, you might say [illegible] and for celibacy [illegible] straight into the old man's [illegible]

PRETTY GIRL—I [illegible] you said [illegible] didn't prosper none [illegible]

MEGAPHONE MAN—Some [illegible] Miss, wait for the [illegible] Everything went well with Peter Faneuil for a time. He [illegible] to the agonies at [illegible] like his uncle's place in the mansion up on Tremont street, with its garden of [illegible] right where Houghton & Dutton's store is [illegible], it would help a lot to [illegible] and polish about the [illegible] of Madeira that should be [illegible] him from France, and every [illegible] was as calm and peaceful as [illegible] built ridge between Woodville and Wells River.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Well, then he got to bragging about it. He called himself the "Jolly Bachelor," and the town got to calling him that, too. He was about 38 years old when he came into full possession. One of the [illegible] went to see he called the Jolly Bachelor.

PRETTY GIRL—Yes, yes go on!

MEGAPHONE MAN—Well then he [illegible] a young lady came [illegible] from England, placed under his protection. Peter showed her every [illegible] but didn't talk love or marriage. He was like a lion with an [illegible] chicken. One evening came [illegible] and one of them, a titled Lady [illegible], proposed and was accepted. Peter Faneuil "jolly bachelor," [illegible] and fumed. He delayed the marriage week after week to the girl's people all made excuses [illegible] but he [illegible] the girl. He was all broken [illegible] and he died at 42.

PRETTY GIRL—I call it dreadfully sad and I am very sorry for him.

LADY OF INCERTAIN AGE—Well I paid my money to be shown around Boston and am asking for only one of the sights I call buy a Laura Jean Libbey whenever I want one.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Pardon me just a moment! Crossing the street here is the oldest market man in the business. The politician with the gray beard. That is Mr. Stacy Hall, on the job down here every day at the age of 84. Think of it! Mr. Hall has made a fortune out of fruits and vegetables, though when he set out from North Berwick, Me., in 1839, he had only his fare to Boston. When he got here he went right to work on a farm (hard to find to-day) in Walnut avenue, Roxbury. They gave him the job of driving the farm wagon to market and the market-lured lad was away. He has been here much more than sixty years.

PRACTICAL POLITICIAN (from Holyoke)—That's the kind of stuff I like to hear.

MEGAPHONE MAN—About Faneuil Hall, the suggestion was first made by Peter Faneuil in 1740. The building was completed in 1742. Nearly twenty years later it was destroyed by fire. This structure, considerably larger than the original, took its place. The town wasn't what you could call thoughtful enough Faneuil to offer to erect a town market. While T. [illegible] were east on the project in Town Meeting July 14 1.40, the "Yes" was [illegible] to one.

PRACTICAL POL—Who didn't?

MEGAPHONE MAN Well [illegible] something to make you sit up [illegible] market in Faneuil Hall is the New Faneuil Hall Market, while the newer market across the way here is Faneuil Hall Market.

OLD GENTLEMAN—Tush, tush!

MEGAPHONE MAN Excuse me!

OLD GENTLEMAN You mean to stand there and tell intelligent people that the old Faneuil Hall market is the New Faneuil Hall Market and that New Faneuil Hall Market is Faneuil Hall Market?

MEGAPHONE MAN That's it!

MEGAPHONE MAN (laughing)—I'm afraid it is.

OLD GENTLEMAN—I won't open my mouth again to-day.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Upstairs in Faneuil Hall, over the hall proper, is the headquarters of the world renowned Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts. They drill in Faneuil Hall every other Monday evening from April to October, inclusive, and parade on the first Monday in June.

TRAVELING SALESMAN (Chicago home)—I suppose it's a hard day on [illegible]

MEGAPHONE MAN—Er—well yes. They start out by going to church

POLITICIAN (from Memphis, Tenn.)—And so this is the Cradle of Liberty. I see! We could use some of the famous men who have spoken or died here.

PRACTICAL POL—I heard Pitt there once.

PRACTICAL POL—Bet your roll on Storrow, eh? I guess you didn't read what Gus Gardner had to say about licking your paws in public, did ye, son?

MEGAPHONE MAN Never mind what I read or what I don't read. Can the politics stuff or take a car to Revere Beach.

MRS. FISKE AND IBSEN TO RIVAL HACKETT AND HIS ROMANTIC DRAMA

New Theatre Company Also Will Still Be Found in the "Art for Art's Sake" Ranks, While "Rupert of Hentzau," "Three Twins" and "Three Weeks" Are to Add to the General Dramatic Festival.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

WITH the coming of Mrs. Fiske to the Hollis Street Theatre in Ibsen's "Pillars of Society," that section of the drama that walks hand in hand with art and contemptuously turns its back upon the dollar sign will move upward a peg or two.

Mrs. Fiske and her "art for art's sake" will not be alone in the field this time, for we have been staying up real late for six nights to pay humble tribute to the New Theatre company, which cares not for profit so long as art is suitably served. Yes, indeed we have.

But has Mrs. Fiske found her loyalty to art so expensive? Probably not, for no closer authority than Harrison Grey Fiske, her manager, declares that she has always turned her Ibsen productions into substantial profits. And Mr. Fiske ought to know, because he keeps the books.

"A Doll's House" and "Hedda Gabler," were remarkably profitable, explains the astute manager, and the tour she made in "Rosmersholm" a few seasons ago was, in the opinion of William Archer, a critic of international reputation, the greatest triumph an Ibsen play has ever known. She presented the piece 199 consecutive times. So perhaps it would be just as well to hold in check your lamentations over the decline of art and its lack of public support.

Through her genuine loyalty to art and its beauty Mrs. Fiske has earned the right to be looked upon as America's most distinguished actress. Whether Ibsen pays or not has never entered into the question with her, and the sincerity of her purpose in standing only for the intelligent, artistic drama fixes her position for all time.

SURPRISES FOR IBSEN STUDENTS.

In "Pillars of Society," which Mrs. Fiske will use during the first week and part of the second week of her stay at the Hollis, there is much that will surprise those who have accepted Ibsen as a writer of sombre, uncomfortable plays. He is positively diverting in this play and exhibits a glint of humor that will surely append to the general run of playgoers with far greater power than any of his plays that we have already seen. Can you imagine an optimistic Ibsen? Well, you will find one in "Pillars of Society."

"Pillars of Society," as you will see it, illustrates strongly a characteristic of Mrs. Fiske—her admirable passion for ensemble. She is one of the very few players whose regard for general artistic effect is sufficiently strong to relegate personal ambition to secondary subordinate endeavor although it will probably be discovered that her own part in the play has been developed to an importance by the wonderful force of her own acting.

* * * * * * *

The week will bring, among other things, a romantic drama with one of our very best romancers and a sword two yards long. James K. Hackett will come to the Majestic in "Monsieur Beaucaire" and make heart-throbs for matinee girls. This will be Mr. Hackett's first appearance here for several seasons.

One of the best signs of a retreating season is the return of old plays, but you can hardly hold it up against Joseph M. Gaites for conniving to send "The Three Twins" back to the Boston Theatre. The first big musical success of the season was this same "Three Twins," and there was much anguish in Mr. Gaites's heart when he was compelled to cut short his former visit at a time when the receipts were running into exceedingly large figures. The piece returns to Boston after a most prosperous cross-country run.

Thrilling melodrama will find a place in Keith's bill this week, when Mrs. Patrick Campbell turns loose her emotions in a playlet that has engaged the serious attention of New Yorkers.

The high-brow element in pugilism will trail to the American Music Hall this week to hear James J. Corbett tell just how Jeffries is going to do it or something of that kind. What Corbett tells about the "big event" will be merely incidental to a sketch that he will present, and which is said to be worthy of his physical accomplishments.

AND "THREE WEEKS" COMES, ALSO.

It looks as if the salacious drama was going to clutch the Grand Opera House for a week, if you take seriously the advance announcement that "Three Weeks" will be moved from the novel to the stage with stunning realism.

Another change to-morrow will be John Craig's presentation of "Rupert of Hentzau" at the Castle Square Theatre.

* * * * * * *

In a review of the past week at the Shubert Theatre, where the New Theatre company has toiled diligently in six different plays, you can admit freely that the engagement has been an artistic success. The week opened rather doubtfully with "The School for Scandal," in which it is perhaps most generous to say there were numerous indiscretions.

But these were quickly wiped out on the second night and the general tone of the performances moved steadily upward. Doubtless the early announcements of the founders at the opening of the New Theatre in New York, that they were out to uplift the drama and wrest it from commercial sharks and didn't care a good-dog whether they lost money doing it, has kept many persons away from the local performances in the belief that only heavy classical plays are included in the repertoire.

The week has yielded ample proof that the New Theatre company makes its appeal in entertaining plays of faultless production and forceful acting. Its millionaire backing is only incidental, for beyond that there is sound principle and a conviction that the public will meet it half-way in any honest, sincere endeavor to give service to the stage.

Whether the promise of the founders to encourage young and unknown playwrights has met with satisfactory response can best be determined by the number of manuscripts submitted. You have a fair answer when it is called to mind that the board of the New Theatre has flooded the offices of the directors with 4,500 dramatic manuscripts up to and including the first week of the current month, and that the daily deliveries have yielded up a proportionate amount of subsidized plays since that time.

Investigation has brought to light the fact that these four thousand odd manuscripts have come from the four corners of the earth—and the statement is made literally. From playwrights all over the world dramatic compositions have been received, and these compositions have been as diversified in external appearance and internal significance as the stamps of the countries that have borne them hither.

The great majority of the plays have been of American making, two-thirds being a fair estimate, it is said. It is a sorry fact, however, according to the theatre authorities, that the American plays have been vastly inferior in construction, originality and general treatment to those that have been submitted from English sources.

From the huge bulk of American manuscripts only two plays were decided upon definitely for production. The plays in question bear the titles "The Nigger," by Edward Sheldon, and "The Cottage in the Air," by Edward Knoblauch.

FEW STRICTLY AMERICAN PLAYS.

John Corbin, when he was literary director of the theatre, laid aside four or five other native-made manuscripts for second reading, and it is possible that one or more of these may be complimented by production. However, the fact remains that, with the possible exception of the Sheldon drama, no one strictly American play in the big initial list revealed sufficient worth to merit its immediate selection.

It has been argued that a possible reason for the wholesale rejection of American manuscripts lays in the fact that the producing directorate of the new dramatic enterprise was partial—strongly partial—to dramas of foreign making. This is not true. 'Strife' is the only foreign-made play chosen for presentation at this writing, and the directors' argument in favor of the American drama becomes all the stronger when it is known that other meritorious foreign manuscripts have been held in abeyance temporarily in the fond hope that American manuscripts might be discovered to take their places.

The first of the theatres to close its regular season is the Globe, which opens at once as a moving picture and vaudeville house. In another week the Gaiety will follow the Globe, closing its doors to burlesque to seek larger profits in vaudeville and pictures.

* * *

The union of William A. Brady with the Shuberts did not come as any particular surprise to those familiar with Mr. Brady's relations with the Syndicate. The news also from New York is that Mr. Brady and the Shuberts will build new theatres in several cities, with Boston included in the list.

* * *

The forthcoming season of stock at the Majestic Theatre is occupying the attention of Jay Hunt and Miss Charlotte Hunt. A company of capable players is promised, and Miss Hunt is now in New York looking after that detail of the enterprise.

* * *

The opening performances of "The Three Twins" at the Boston Opera House will take the form of a complimentary benefit to William H. Lathrop, Francis Ferguson and John Maynard, the young men who smile at you from the box office window when they take your money.

BILLS AT BOSTON THEATRES

Hollis Street.

Mrs Fiske and the Manhattan company will present Henrik Ibsen's "Pillars of Society at the Hollis to morrow evening. It is the first offering of Mrs. Fiske's season here, which will be limited to two weeks. For the last half of the second week she will give "Hamlet," by Gerhart Hauptmann, and in conjunction with the "drama poem" the Manhattan company will appear in the one-act play, "The Secret Orchard," by the Austrian dramatist, Arthur Schnitzler.

Majestic Theatre.

James K Hackett will come to the Majestic to-morrow and present for the first time in this city "Monsieur Beaucaire." Mr Hackett's engagement in Boston is limited to one week. "Monsieur Beaucaire" is a play that should afford Mr Hackett every opportunity to display his talent as a romantic actor, and in this field he is no one on the American stage to-day who is his peer.

Shubert.

For the second and last week of the engagement of the New Theatre company at the Shubert Theatre plays will be given in the following order: Monday evening, Sheridan's comedy, "The School for Scandal." Tuesday evening, Galsworthy's "Strife." Wednesday afternoon and evening, the double bill, Bester's modern comedy, "Nell," and Masterlinck's "Sister Beatrice." Thursday evening, "Twelfth Night." Friday evening, "The Winter's Tale," on the Shakespeare stage; Saturday afternoon, "The School for Scandal," and Saturday evening, Sheldon's "The Nigger."

Keith's.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell comes to Keith's the coming week for an engagement that will probably mark the height of a remarkable season at this house. She will appear in a one-act play, called "Explation." A comedy feature of the bill will be Bowers, Walters and Crooker, "The Three Rubes." Warren, Lord and Myers will make their first appearance in Boston, and other features will be the Flying Banvards, a big aerial acrobatic act; Hinde & Hawthorne the female vaudeville quartet, and others.

American Music Hall.

Another long list of star features at the American Music Hall this week makes it difficult to select any one of them for the headline position. The sporting interest, however, will be centred in the appearance of James J. Corbett, who will present a one-act playlet, "A Thief in the Night."

Boston.

The return of "Three Twins" to the Boston Theatre to-morrow will bring back to Boston the most catchy piece that was one of the sensations of the early season. With Clifton Crawford lending the cast and Mayme Gehrue added to it, playgoers may feel certain that the piece has lost none of its entertaining qualities.

Castle Square Theatre.

"Rupert of Hentzau," continuing the story of "The Prisoner of Zenda," in scene, action and characters, will be given by the John Craig company at the Castle Square Theatre during the week beginning Monday. Its interest begins three years after the close of "The Prisoner of Zenda," and, of course, will appear to the ... readers of Rudolf Rassendyll and Rupert of Hentzau. It made so great a success during its first week, and Mr. Hassell will again play Colonel Sapt, the gruff and loyal old soldier.

Howard Athenæum.

At the Howard this week will be seen Bill Lewis, the amateur boxing champion of New York, in charge of the exhibition of Jack Sheehan. Mr Sheehan is confident that he is the coming champion, and will challenge the winner of the Jeffries-John Lees contest.

Colonial.

The success of "The Third Degree" at the Colonial Theatre is so thorough keeping with the prosperity that attended its last presentation here last season. Another week will open at the Colonial to-morrow, and Miss Helen Ware and the other members of the excellent company will continue the loyal work they have already begun.

Park.

William Hodge, as the lawyer from Kokomo, in "The Man From Home," at the Park Theatre, finds Boston more receptive to the delicious comedy of the piece at each performance, and with the beginning of a new week to-morrow the play is apparently no nearer the end of its engagement than during its opening performances here.

Tremont.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

The show this week at the Bowdoin Square Theatre will be replete with the best of vaudeville acts, while the picture display will be alive with exclusive films. The old patrons of the theatre will welcome Harry Brooks, a former member of the Lathrop stock company. He will appear in a vaudeville specialty.

Globe Theatre.

A season of high-class vaudeville and moving pictures will begin at the Globe Theatre to-morrow. Manager Jaquith will follow the same liberal policy with his programmes that made the Globe so popular last Summer. The films announced for the first performances have been carefully selected.

Gaiety.

"The Jersey Lilies" made their appearance at the Gaiety Theatre Monday, presenting two musical satires by a strong array of talent, including the Herman comedian, Leon Errol; James and Lucia Cooper, Fannie Vedder and the National Four, and a beauty chorus of thirty girls.

Waldron's Casino.

Another week of spirited entertainment may be expected at Waldron's Casino Theatre, beginning Monday, for "The Great Behman Show," of which much that is complimentary has been said, will drop in for a week. George Armstrong will lead the comedy contingent, and those who have seen him know what a regular cut-up he is.

Columbia.

The week's attraction at the Columbia Theatre will be "The Ducklings," which comes with the highest endorsements from all cities along the line where they have thus far appeared. The burlesques will be presented, "Lee Janitor" and "A One Night Opera."

Palace.

The programme at the new Palace Theatre the coming week will be made up of features entirely new to Boston. The headline are is presented by Louis Chevalier, who appears with his company in "A Lucky Liar." Besides several other features there will be the usual excellent list of motion pictures.

Hub.

The feature act for this week at the Hub Theatre will be Carlisle's Dogtown Pantomime. Performing a little drama all its own, one of the extraordinary features of this wonderful troupe of dogs and ponies. "Tom," the talking pony will please the children and entertain the older folk.

Grand.

Wilmer Gill's dramatization of he most remarkable story, "Three Weeks" will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House this week. Probably no dramatic event of the year will inspire so much interest as the forthcoming production. The passionate poetry, philosophy and truth of the great human emotions are all portrayed in this book play. The company is headed by Miss Jeanne Fowler as "the Lady" and in her support will be seen George Fleury as Paul.

Scenic Temple.

During the coming week at the Scenic Temple another exceptionable clever list of entertainers are on the bill, including a number which has been specially featured at many high class vaudeville houses. The motion pictures will be carefully selected and the illustrated songs will be up-to-date.

Austin & Stone's.

It is hard to tell whether the theatre programme or the curio hall features are fulfilled at first call at Austin & Stone's Museum. There is no doubt, however, that but few horses in the country give so much for one admission, and the coming week will have much on view in both halls that will interest amusement seekers.

Sunday Concerts.

There will be concerts to-night at the Castle Square Hub, Majestic, Olympia, Keith's and Howdoin Square Theatres, and at the Howard Athenæum and American Music Hall.

VINCENT GIRLS PLAN AERONAUTICS WHILE THEY REHEARSE PLAY

Discuss Honeymoons in Aeroplanes and Think Eleanora Sears Will Be First of Feminine Smart Set to Make Voyage Among the Clouds This Summer—Dorothy Jordan to Dance Solo at Vincent Club Show.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

As an exhilarant, aeroplaning is the next innovation for which the athletic Boston society girl is secretly pining and for which she is laying a gay plan.

"Who among us will be the first to be initiated in the new sport?"

So full of dash and dazzle and romantic charm was the forecast made by the club's most prophetic member that several of the would be aerolites were shrieking with glee at the prospects, and right then and there impromptu semi-aerial ballets were executed in celebration of future diversions.

"Think of a moonlight excursion over a blossoming world and"——then her cue, and pretty Dorothy came back to earth or a little nearer to it in her exquisite dance.

But there were others left to plan, and from what I could make out of the rather flimsy plans there are to be several aeroplane honeymoons among the Vincent Club members who are to become brides in the near future. But it wasn't long before they all had to descend to earth once more and get busy with their rehearsals, for only a few days remain before their public performance, and each moment must be made to count.

Plans are at last pretty well completed, and the show this year promises to be the most brilliant and amusing of any yet given by that famous organization.

DOROTHY JORDAN TO DANCE SOLO.

There is general rejoicing over the announcement that dainty Dorothy Jordan is to dance a solo ballet, which is one of the most interesting on the programme. Mrs. A. Robeson Sargent (Maria de Acosta), whose wedding in New York last fall was one of the most important of the season and who is to be the heroine of the play "Rouge et Noir," is to be another of the solo dancers.

Mrs. Henry Thompson (Helen Apthorp), who has not taken part since her marriage is also to do a solo dance.

Miss Marie Ames and Miss Ruth Flint are practicing diligently on their Spanish dance. A dance which will be of particular interest, since the scenes of the play are laid at Monte Carlo, will be that given by Mrs. Elizabeth Jones and Miss Flint, who will represent "chic" in their dual dance.

"Gold money" will be illustrated by Mrs. William Minot, Mrs. Lydeua Gray and Miss Claire Means. The Misses Molly Hall, Esther Pickering, Helen Grozier and Margaret Bradley will make an interesting group of dancers representing "dice shakers."

Miss Margaret De Ford and Miss Susanna Cunningham, two of this Winter's most interesting debutantes, will be the soloists in the chorus of the "Riviera Girls." Both girls are numbered among the newer members of the club and are working overtime in order to make good. The Misses Josephine Dorr, Susan Dabney, Frances Lippitt and Hildegarde Lassell make up the chorus of Riviera girls.

Miss Rosamond Bradley, daughter of the Robert S. Bradleys of Commonwealth avenue, is to be Mrs. Fairbanks. The roles of Freddy and Harry Fairbanks and Miss Gwendoline Fairbanks will be done respectively by that pretty coquette, Miss Constance Zerrahn, and Miss Katherine Salmon-and, another bud, and Miss Margaret Stackpole.

The interesting blonde beauty, Miss Nora Thayer daughter of the John E. Thayers, will play the role of Lord Arthur Arcyle. Her sister, Miss Evelyn Thayer is to be captain of the drill, which is always one of the most interesting features of the show. The handsomest of all the Vincent girls, Miss Rosamond Dixey, is to play the part of the croupier at Monte Carlo and has just the requisite amount of dash and vim to carry the part off amiably.

MANY TO TAKE PART.

Miss Ellen Farnsworth is to be Miss Molly Moore, and Miss Leslie Lindsay, Miss Spitfire; the Edward C. Wheeler, Jr. (Molly Adams), who last year played the leading role of the Sultan, is to take a man's part. Miss Pauline Jones will be Bide Brown, and Miss Elizabeth Denny, Dan Dix.

The girls selected for the drill—and they must always be the tallest in the club—are the Misses Cornelia Wolcott, Mary Lee, Evelyn Tayor, Marie Lee, Charlotte Allen, Leslie Bradley, Alice Thorndike, Grace Stackpole, Dorothy Mandell, Alice De Ford, Alice Bradford and Madeline Appleton.

The dances have all been chosen and will be up to the mark of other years. Those who will take the part of girls—Miss Laura Greenough, Miss Ruth Nickerson, Miss Bay Lemoine, Miss Mary Lee, Miss Winnifred Miss Dorothy Draper, Miss Mary Lee, Miss Marion Wainwright, Miss Prescott Bigelow, Jr., Miss Mary Curtis, Miss Elizabeth Millet, Miss Ashley Clark, Miss Katherine Foster, Miss Nancy Hale, Miss Miriam Shaw, Miss Jane Bigelow, Mrs. Osborn Howes and Miss Edith Fitz.

Those who will sing in the chorus are Miss Ella Lyman, Miss Ernestine Thorp, Miss Annie Peabody, Miss Elizabeth Ayer, Miss Margery Prescott, Miss Mary Parkman, Miss Katherine L. Amee, Miss Mollie Tufts, Miss Louise Wheelwright, Miss Marion Weld, Miss Elizabeth Lee, Miss Harriette Woods, Miss Amy Thorp, Miss Madeline Dixon, Miss Alice Garland, Miss Mary Gardiner, Miss Jotta Sawyer, Miss Mary Pierce, Miss Anne Nelson, Miss Priscella Reynolds and Miss Mae Loring.

Among the patronesses are Mrs. Eben S. Draper, Mrs. John E. Thayer, Mrs. Philip S. Parker, Mrs. Gardiner M. Lane, Mrs. H. H. Fay, Mrs. Henry D. Burnham, Mrs. George P. Gardner, Mrs. Bayard Tuyner, Mrs. Edward Hamlin, Mrs. Francis J. Amory, Mrs. Henry Jackson, Mrs. William Farnsworth, Mrs. W. W. Vaughan, Mrs. Robert S. Bradley, Mrs. Henry Parkman, Mrs. William A. AMERICANS WILL BE IN THEIR GLORY AT THE KING'S STATE BALL IN JUNE

INVITED LIMITED TO 2,300

By CHARLES P. NORCROSS.
Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, April 23. There are brilliant times ahead for the American colony. The first State ball will be given at the King early in June before the court's departure for Windsor Castle for the Ascot race week. The second ball will be held early in July.

The invitations are limited to 2,300 for each ball and the Lord Chamberlain has been compelled to notify many American applicants that presentation at court is necessary before an invitation to a court ball is possible. English women who have not attended the courts regularly for the past three years have been ruthlessly cut out of the list.

Among Americans outside of peeresses receiving invitations are Mrs J J Astor and Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Drexel Mrs. J. H. Smith, Mr and Mrs. Waldorf Astor Mrs. Paul Phipps, Mrs. Michael Grace Mr and Mrs. Bradley Martin, Mrs. Moore Mrs. Harold Barling, Mrs. Graham Miller and Mrs Potter Palmer.

Even Mrs. Bradley Martin's collection of French crown jewels is not considered too heavy to wear on such occasions. Mrs. Moore wears a wonderful tiara on her corsage, suspended from her neck by a thin chain of small scrolls. But no tiara worn by the Queen or even by the American colony can be compared to the jewels worn by the Marchioness Londonderry, although the pearls worn by the Duchess of Marlborough are more magnificent than the Queen's, and Mrs. Martin takes the palm where rubies are concerned.

The Duchess of Marlborough will entertain Colonel Roosevelt at a large dinner party given at Sunderland House. Most of England's distinguished Statesmen and the pick of the smart world will be present. The dinner will be followed by a reception.

The Duchess has recovered her lost spirits and looks very pretty and animated. She is no longer worried about the health of her son, Lord Ivor.

Mania For Barefoot Dance Is Raising a Rumpus in Society

Angry Fathers Bid Emulators of Lady Constance Richardson Gyrate in Their Own Rooms.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, April 23.—Fired by the example of Lady Constance Richardson's delegate for the sacred cause of charity, numerous society women have been giving dancing room entertainments in the exclusive set and budding misses and boys' coming matures have alike galloped on bare covered platforms to their hearts' content. Many charities have benefited by the craze. In one instance the dance was [illegible] men only and was [illegible] church.

This terpsichorean outbreak has been responsible for many family feuds. Though [illegible] and [illegible] have been [illegible] of irate fathers, who have commanded their mutinous children to confine their gyrations to the privacy of their own apartments.

IN UMBRELLA FIGHT.

Austrian Court Ladies Exchange Blows After Quarrel.

VIENNA, April 23. A conflict between [illegible] Archduchess Leopoldine Ferdinand, her the Austrian throne, and his wife, the Duchess Hohenberg, on the one side, and the rest of the court on the other, is fast assuming its intensity since the Emperor Francis Joseph has raised the Countess Chotek to the rank of a Duchess.

At the launching of the Austrian battleship Zrinyi, at Trieste, a deplorable friction developed between the Duchess and the Archduchess Maria Valerie, the daughter of [illegible] Emperor.

When the festivities were over, the Archduchess Maria and the latter's morganatic wife exchanged bitter words. Their exchanges grew bitter and a scuffle followed, both the ladies trying to use their umbrellas on each other's heads, their husbands having to separate them by force.

MARY GARDEN ANGRY.

Hammerstein Says She'll Get Over It; She Says, "No."

PARIS, April 23. Mary Garden has brought two motor cars with her, one a small Renault, the other a huge Fiereo [illegible] for touring purposes. She will go to Switzerland this Summer in an endeavor to relax her over-strained nerves. Oscar Hammerstein says gleefully:

"Those motors have her fits of temper, but she'll come back in a more humble frame of mind, if she is let alone."

To this Mary retorted.

SAGAN ASTOUNDS HIS WIFE WITH A GIFT HE PAID FOR

SHYLOCK DUNS ALEXANDER

By VANCE THOMPSON.

PARIS, April 23.—Anna Gould Princess de Sagan has expelt a million dollars the price of her matrimonial life, for her husband has bought, paid for and presented her with enormous portraits of two of his distinguished relatives.

Hitherto her expeditures have been that she not only paid for what her husband bought, but discovered later that they came in for commissions on the sales as well. At least this was the uncommon happenge as regards but first husband.

One of the portraits is that of Alphonse de Berghes, archbish op of Malines, who was born in 1625 and died in 1698; the [illegible] of his father Count de Berghes, Counsellor of State to His Most Catholic Majesty, Philip the First of France, Captain-General and grand master of artillery. The last Count de Berghes died two years ago. His mother was a de Selliéres, a sister of Helh's mother, the [illegible] Princess de Sagan. Hence the Prince's present is no picture as a compliment to his mother, although she did her best to disinherit him in favor of her favorite son, the Duke of Vaucourt.

Through Gambling Debt.

These pictures found their way to Paris through a gambling debt. One night Count de Berghes lost to Prince Ypsilanti the sum of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. It was at Vienna, where the Count was military attache to the French embassy.

This debt, though a gambling one, was sustained in the Austrian courts, and so the estate was sold to pay it. Among other things the family pictures went and those just mentioned found their way to one of the numerous money lenders who had accumulated Prince de Sagan in the day of his peculiary distress. He was glad to be able to render the old Shylock a good turn, and at the same time pay a tribute to the memory of his mother. So good natured Heine bought the pictures and presented them to his wife.

They are by the painter Rigo and now hang on the top of the famous cross stair case in the pink palace [illegible] Trianon, or "monument of folly," as the Parisians designate Anna Gould's mansion on the corner of the Avenue de Malakoff.

H. Addison Alexander Sued.

Alfred Thomas a well known English money lender of No 34 Rue Monthabor, who befriended Prince de Sagan, Prince Miguel de Braganza and other notables in days gone by is now suing Henry Addison Alexander, former Counsel to the American Embassy in Paris and now senior partner in the law firm of Alexander and Gouraud, Whitehall, London.

Thomas lent Mr. Alexander money when [illegible] divorce from Jessie Torrance Mayson Alexander, daughter of the late General Torrance of Chicago and now Mrs. Plakinton of London, was pending.

Alexander has been frequently in Paris, but invariably fought shy of the money lender. In the heyday of his glory, when Alexander was legal advisor to Ambassador Eustis, he did many favors for the money lender in the way of sending around old friends to seek his help in monetary money difficulties—and they never failed to find it, though, of course, they had to pay the Shylock's pound of flesh when the reckoning day came.

Among those whom Alexander acted as Good Samaritan to were Miss Gilbert, the heiress, when she was stranded in Paris, Thomas Ross Winans, whose father disinherited him for marrying a Spanish dancer, and Duse de Fouqr, whom her very bed was auctioned off for three francs at the Hotel Bronet.

PHOTOS BY MILLION.

American Women Pictured Lavishly in Paris.

PARIS, April 23.—Two million photographs is the staggering record set by a well-known photographer by two distinguished American women, to be used as many cards for parties and dinners. This insertion for bills of fare for fashionable dinners is due to the Baroness d'Erlanger and her sister, the Countess de Romain, formerly the Misses Slidells of New Orleans.

One side of the photograph is devoted to the list of good things to be offered the guests in the way of food, and the other represents houses, [illegible], beautiful rooms and picture galleries in the various homes of various ladies. Some of the photographs show our hostesses themselves, who have long been known in Parisian society and who are celebrated for their beauty and grace. [illegible] the town house of the Baroness in the Avenue Kleber and her splendid chateau near Dauville, the famous seaside and racing resort, furnish many charming views and are eagerly sought by the visitors.

REDMOND STANDS OUT AS IRELAND'S MAN OF THE HOUR

CRISIS IS NEAR [illegible]

Special Correspondence Boston American.

DUBLIN, April 12 - [illegible] is now making [illegible] forward at West [illegible] silent steadiness of an Apache [illegible] anche. Nothing on earth can stem the tide that is now rising to flood tide in the House of Commons. The shrewd men who sit on both front benches are well aware of this, and they are selling their houses in order for the crisis in June that seems to be so certain to arrive.

Both Asquith and Balfour know that the people do not want a general election just now, with all its expense and disturbance of trade. But if another election must come the people will face it with a grim determination to [illegible] at the polls. In the present temper of the British people Premier Asquith is certain to get a clear mandate from the voters.

Despite the bustle with which those political worthies, William O'Brien and Timothy Healy, are trying hard, with the open aid of the Tories, to build behind Redmond, the latter is steering his course with unshaken [illegible] accuracy.

Redmond Centre of Fight.

No somerhic has Redmond borne himself in the trying situations that have crowded upon eh n other rapidly in the last three months that friends and foes in the London editorial offices are paying willing tribute to the Irish leader as one of the few great parliamentary leaders in all England today. The more friendly Times, the Pall Mall Gazette, owned by the American tory, Waldorf Astor, even the Standard, have the personal poem of good nature, fairness, free in double-leaded editorials on Mr. Redmond as the man of the hour in Parliament.

One London daily said a few days ago of John Redmond were an Englishman or he is an Irishman, the king would be calling upon him to form a cabinet as prime minister."

For one thing, the Irish leader must be thanked by all politicians in England. He has kept the veto issue clear as crystal before the country. Strong efforts even by friends, were made to move him on to [illegible]. But he would not be spoken and to day his vindication is here.

Every sane politician in the Liberal party is now acknowledging that Redmond's policy is unique as a bell and that in fact, it is the only policy upon which to go to the country. While the Lord's veto on legislation remains democratic government at Westminster is impossible. That being so, nothing is left but to remove the veto by any or every means that the people can command.

A Shrewd Politician.

Here is where the political genius of Redmond asserted itself. From the beginning he openly expressed the opinion that the budget should not leave the Commons until either the Lords had yielded or the Crown had promised guarantees to help give the Lords, he asked, the chance either of passing or rejecting the budget? The whole fight is over the right of the Commons to the sole control of finance. On the other hand, the Government and many Liberals want the budget to go through and become law before any appeal is made to the electorate. The people like the budget, and time has shown them how advantageous its provisions are. Many moderate to the core, would sadly grieve were the budget to go flung up. The whole matter is one of tactics.

Mr. Redmond is a shrewd politician He has no dislike to the budget. He knows how welcome it is to the British democracy But he knows that only force will bring the Lords to their senses, and that if he can utilize the budget as a weapon against them, he will not hesitate.

The fight that is now upon the country will be fierce and stubborn, and perhaps, too not of short duration. The Lords are fighting for their lives, and men who fight for their lives fight to the end. The democracy and aristocracy are for the first time in English history locked in angry conflict. Whichever wins, kills the other If the people are victorious the power of the Lords is gone forever. Then the way is clear for Ireland and home rule.

NOVEL BURGLAR ALARM.

Weights in Curtain Set Off Bells and Turn on Lights.

VIENNA, April 23.—Extremely simple in design but effective in purpose is a new electrical device for protection against burglary invented by an Austrian engineer, Herr Max Trautsman. It consists of a stuff curtain having inside the material a number of small weights so delicately adjusted that at the slightest touch of the curtain the weights start alarm bells ringing, simultaneously turning on the electric light in the room.

Hung before a window, door, cupboard, safe, picture, or anything else for which protection is sought, Herr Trautmann's patent curtain is a certain guard It cannot be tampered with in any way, not even by a person fully cognizant of its mechanism. The electrical connections cannot be cut off without the alarm apparatus being set in action.

Vatican Feeling the Pulse of Paperdom

Cardinal Del Val Orders Copy of Every U. S. Publication Commenting on Roosevelt Incident.

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA.
Special Cable to Boston American.

ROME, April 23.—The American mail is eagerly awaited here. The Vatican. Soon after Colonel Roosevelt left Rome the Papal authorities expressed a wish to be favored with a copy of every paper and magazine commenting on the Pope's refusal to receive Mr Roosevelt, with the result that several thousand copies of the newspapers have been forwarded from the United States.

The Vatican's exceptional interest in American public opinion was revealed the other day when the Pope's secretary, Cardinal Merry del Val, said to a high American prelate that the comments of the American press touching the Roosevelt incident had been highly favorable to the Vatican and that the whole only served to strengthen the position of the Catholic Church in America.

Huge Passenger Airship Designed to Carry Sixty Persons.

BERLIN, April 23. An aerial Dreadnought—a huge [illegible] airship—is being built at [illegible] a proposed passenger air route [illegible] to hold to carry fifty or sixty persons and to travel at the rate of fifty miles an hour. Its inventor is Engineer Ar[illegible] Leiter of Treves. The balloon, which has a framework of steel, will be [illegible] feet long, and the weight of [illegible] the vessel is thirty tons. The airship will be driven by five motors developing 600 horsepower between them. This [illegible] of the air is to be [illegible] the [illegible].

BRUSSELS, April 23.—After years of reflected shame as the subjects of the late King Leopold, it is a real relief to the Belgian people to be able to look toward the royal palace for inspiration to all that is best and truest in home life. Popular from the first, the new King and Queen have now become objects of admiration.

But it is to Her Majesty more than to the King that is owed this loving affection. The example of her home life is such as completely to revolutionize most recent traditions of Belgian royal relationships.

Where the best and finest [illegible] Leopold were lulled in [illegible] ease, to be [illegible] a house that has no peer. The Queen, though she devotes much time to her duties as the first lady of the nation, yet finds opportunity to be the governess to her own children. She bears the lessons of the youngsters who are in line for crown honors and is devoting the rare and attentive to them that she feels is needed to best fit them for the positions they must occupy and the duties that must be theirs.

"They are not only my children," she said recently, "but they will be my legacy to Belgium. I cannot trust their care to another."

NEW DEATH AGENT.

Krupps Ready with Electrical Engine of Destruction.

BERLIN, April 23.—The Krupps of Essen have circulated a private and confidential offer to well-known scientific experts for an invention which shall project electrical energy to a distance. The basic idea is to direct powerful electrical currents into the bag of balloons and explode them also to direct this current into the magazines of warships.

Many brains are concentrated on the problem and every one believes it will be the next development of warfare. Success would mean the destruction at one stroke of the world's aerial and marine dreadnoughts.

S. L. Bouton of New York is in Berlin organizing a charitable fund for the relief of emigrants who, being undesirable, are refused admission to the United States, and sent back to the European ports from which they embarked Bouton proposes systematic organization, including the holding of concerts aboard Trans Atlantic steamers for the benefit of these returned emigrants.

PLANS OF "THEATRE CLUB."

Only Artistic Gems Are to Be Produced.

LONDON April 23.—Society's latest endeavour is the Theatre Club, which has for its aim not only the artistic drama, but skating, fencing, dancing, pistol practice, besides the usual social pursuits of a West End club. The club has a handsome theatre of its own, where "commercial" plays will be barred, but artistic gems which are never to the ordinary playgoer will be produced.

Naturally these plays will escape the censorship, so that some very "advanced" dramatic fare may be expected. The club will have a splendid ballroom and an up-to-date restaurant. Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree is its president, with the eminent actor-managers, Arthur Bouchier and H. B. Irving, as vice-presidents of the theatre committee.

New England's Commercial Supremacy

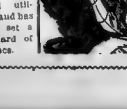
No. 4

ONE of the industries for which New England is famous is the manufacture of clothing. This section does a big share toward clothing the nation, and it enjoys the reputation of making the highest class of apparel.

This is one of the oldest industries in New England and it has always held its own, although not compared with other sections, as a wool-growing region. New England could sell its clothing in the best markets, because it had a high class of workmen and manufacturers, whose names were synonyms for quality. It was never known in the marts as the home of "sweat shops" and the producer of shoddy. It has always been a region where good wages were paid and skilled hands employed.

The clothing industry as at present prosecuted all over the world had its origin in Yankee inventive genius. It is the result of the invention of the sewing machine by Elias Howe. Before his day all clothing was the product of needles held in fingers. The men and women who then made garments in this country labored as patiently, and almost as slowly, as the Chinese do now and have always done.

The Howe device first was a household implement almost exclusively, but for more than fifty years it has been one of the greatest manufacturing assets ever known.



New England was the pioneer in its industrial utilization and has always set a standard of excellence.

Massachusetts has always led New England in this industry. The latest figures available state that in this State alone there were 649 clothing factories, and that they represented in capital an investment of $17,144,259. The value of the stock used annually in these establishments was $21,090,057, and the value of the goods reached $28,810,000. Nearly 18,000 men and women worked at this trade and were paid annually $7,266,165.

Boston is the centre of the clothing industry not only in Massachusetts but for all New England. There are nearly 400 manufacturing houses here, and the value of their product is estimated at more than one half of all the clothing manufactured in the old Bay State.

There are now, it is estimated, about 10,000 persons employed in the industry in this city alone. Boston took the lead in New England many years ago, and has made a proud showing in it from the first, in spite of fierce competition in industrial centres in many other parts of the country.

Clothing is made in this city and all other parts of New England under conditions which make for cleanliness of the product and are better guarantees of health for employees than those which prevail in many other manufacturing centres. It is an industry which will continue to grow in New England, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Maine, Connecticut, Vermont and New Hampshire.

LIBERALS WILL CRACK WHIP OVER THE KING

WILL ASK FOR NEW PEERS

Stead Declares Conflict Between People and Nobles Is More Revolutionary Than Ever.

By WILLIAM T. STEAD.
Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, April 23.—Last week the English Liberals were almost in despair, this week they are almost absurdly confident.

Last week they were ruefully anticipating that the ministry would be defeated on Monday night when the motion was made to take the time of the House for [illegible] but this week they are full of exultation, for the budget has been scrapped. The Irish Liberal-Labor forces no more mean to [illegible] and with a solid majority of one hundred are pressing on with a united front to challenge the authority of the peers.

Last week the cabinet nearly went to pieces. Some ministers called [illegible] and expressed with great freedom their objection to the proposal made by Mr. Asquith and ultimately carried out, that if the Lords rejected the veto bill he would appeal to the Crown and bring them to heel. The only method of doing this entertained by the cabinet is that of advising the Crown to create five hundred new members to override the obstructive hereditary Lords. Asquith did not in set terms declare his intention to give this advice, but his language was interpreted immediately to have that meaning by Balfour, and was enthusiastically seconded in that sense by the Liberal rank and file.

Asquith "Puts It Up" to King.

Asquith's words were guarded. His first step after the Lords had rejected the veto bill would be to inform His Majesty what the King knows very well already: that the veto is to be abolished in this Parliament he must see the Crown to create new peers. He will not, however, advise action being taken until after another election. He will rather resign or ask the King to dissolve Parliament.

If the latter alternative is taken he will warn His Majesty in advance that if he should cause back with a majority he will refuse to continue in office until the king is willing to be advised to make five hundred new peers. The King will not be asked to pledge himself in advance to assent to the advice. Asquith will give it as a contingency contemplated. He will, however, be formally informed of the only condition on which the Liberals will be content to serve him in future, and the general election will be fought out on the clear understanding that every vote cast for the Liberals is a vote cast for creating five hundred Liberal peers by the prerogative of the Crown.

Revolution Seems Imminent.

If the issue should be thus forced, both parties will be playing double or quits. If the Liberals win, the Conservatives declare the result will be the establishment of a single chamber of the government; if the Liberals lose, England passes for an indefinite time under the rule of the Lords and half the nation will be reduced to a condition of political helots. Out of this politicans servitude they will only be able to escape by a more or less violent revolution.

No one knows how the constituencies would vote. The Liberals profess that if secure of a majority of one, they will insist upon the right to advise, which is the constitutional jargon for a command to the King to create the requisite number of new peers.

There is no legal difficulties in the way of creating peers by prerogative, but such a wholesale creation would be unprecedented and unconstitutional and would be resisted by the hereditary peers to the last gasp In that case the exercise of the royal prerogative would only have precipitated a far more dangerous collision between the two houses than what it was intended to prevent.

Only Chance a Compromise.

It is hoped that at the last moment the King may persuade or compel the party leaders to agree upon some compromise that will give the Liberals a sporting chance of obtaining a majority in the House of Lords. The only way this can be done will be by giving the Crown at the beginning of each Parliament the right to nominate members of the Upper House on the advice of his ministers on the understanding that the political complexion of a majority of the nation as registered at the polls.

A compromise to-day or a revolution at some near future date are the alternatives The question of the hour is whether the King will be wise or strong enough to compel the Tory party to make a concession which does not [illegible] a [illegible].

LAWMAKERS TAKE UP DIRECT NOMINATION BILL TOMORROW

Massachusetts Lower House Almost Sure to Pass the Riley Resolution.

The question of whether United States Senators should be elected by direct vote of the people will be threshed out on the floor of the House to-morrow. The fight will come on the resolution introduced by Representative Riley of Malden declaring that Congress call a convention for the purpose of proposing a constitutional amendment providing for the election of United States Senators.

The decision of the House to-morrow is the Massachusetts Legislature's first national importance inasmuch as two-thirds of the States have already adopted similar resolutions and favorable action by only three more would result in the calling of a convention to force into being the amendment. The bill is now the most important piece of national legislation to come before the people of Massachusetts since the Legislature of 1903 memorialized Congress in favor of the Federal income tax amendment, which has been ratified by all but eight States and which, with the possible exception of the Webb-Kenyon bill, is the most important piece of legislation to be passed by Congress during the present session.

The passage of the Riley resolution by the House to-morrow is the first step in a campaign which, if successful, will result in the submission to the people of the State at the November election of a constitutional amendment providing for the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people. Should the Riley resolution pass the House to-morrow, it will go to the Senate, where it is expected to meet with little opposition. Should it pass the Senate, it will be referred to the next Legislature, which will be required to pass upon it before it can be submitted to the people. Should the next Legislature approve the resolution, it will be submitted to the people at the November election in 1911, and if ratified by the people will be incorporated in the constitution of the State.

Should the Riley resolution pass the House to-morrow, it will be the first time in the history of the State that the House has ever passed upon a resolution providing for the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people. Two years ago the House refused to pass the Riley resolution by a vote of 107 to 93. Last year the House refused to pass the resolution by a vote of 108 to 92. Should the House pass the resolution to-morrow, it will be the first time that the Legislature has ever passed upon the resolution favorably.

Wade In But Wade Out.

By Herbert Kaufman

Skill and knowledge can't be measured except in their application; we make no mention of good intention when we announce the record of a fizzler.

Half-hatched plans are as useless as half-hatched eggs—if you don't "set" them out, you'd better throw them out.

Thoroughness is the important thing. The highways of history are littered with the wreckage of those who could not achieve what they had conceived.

There are no short cuts to permanency. Doggedness has always conquered brilliance. Persistence has earned greater rewards than genius. We admire the wit, but we rely upon the sober, industrious plugger.

If you go in for applause, you go out without it. Deliver your share day by day and your compensation will adjust itself automatically.

There is entirely too much theory of how to be successful. It isn't a matter to be figured out; it must be worked out. Correspondence schools can't teach you to be a millionaire. There are no new rules by which fortune is won. The problem is just the same as it was at the beginning of time; well directed effort backed by enthusiasm and ambition, caution, care of detail, and constant dissatisfaction with yesterday's labor—these are the elements on which prosperity has been founded since the start of society.

You get no more than you earn, and when you take more than your share, you lose it through lack of strength to defend what you did not secure with your own ability.

The financial and business generals of this and every other century did not forecast their ultimate station.

Most of our merchant princes began as country clerks; they were the best employes they knew how to be; they got into the habit of reliability, until it became chronic.

They made most of their money purchasing at fifty cents on the dollar the assets of fools who tried to take shorter paths to the top.

[illegible]EP GAME IS ON IN COPPER MARKET

By E. A. WILKINS.

STATE STREET, April 23.—The action [illegible] copper stocks, or at least certain of [th]em, reminds one of the conditions prevailing previous to the formation of the Amalgamated Copper Company in 1899. It will be remembered that stockholders of some of the companies that were taken over by this combination at that time were practically clubbed into submission and their stock taken away from them at the terms desired by the Amalgamated company. If the same [illegible]ding is not happening at the present time [w]hen the writer is woefully mistaken.

The game is a deep one and powerful in[te]rests are behind it. They will leave nothing undone to accomplish their purpose and sad to say they have been and are now riding roughshod to accomplish their ends. Legitimate stockholders are being forced out of their holdings by all the art[ful] methods known to the manipulator. If [i]t cannot be done one way it will be an[ot]her. The copper merger will go through, [an]d when it comes the big interests will [be] found with the stocks. The dumping out [proc]ess must be near an end, and those [w]ho can stick it out will likely get their just returns. The sudden disappearance of ore reserves and the diminishing stock values lately reported by mines which are candidates for the merger may represent actual conditions. They at least have facilitated inside interests in gathering stock at the low levels.

North Butte, for instance, after a recovery from its low price to 42 less than a fortnight ago, was sold by insiders on knowledge of poor exhibit to be made by the annual report. Its low price of 31 made this week was caused by liquidation of small holders upon the appearance of the report. Although Broker Clark of this city did not succeed in getting representation on the board of directors at the annual meeting in Duluth last Monday, the management promises that the East shall have a representative later in the year. The worst of the North Butte episode is known and the management promises to keep stockholders informed as to doings by issuing quarterly reports. The acquisition of additional properties will release the company from liability under the apex law. The company has 200,000 shares of treasury stock with which to finance additions necessary.

The threatened disruption of the Copper Producers' Association is regrettable, inasmuch as it will keep information from the public and give a few the advantage. These monthly figures are the most valuable set of statistics that have ever been promulgated in the history of the copper industry. They have furnished the investor with actual conditions, and although perchance a purchaser of copper has been able to take advantage of prices, knowing the constantly increasing supplies, publicity is now the by-word which is becoming recognized more and more by corporations. It is pertinent to remark that when decreasing [illegible] [illegible]ses are reported the producers will [benef]it by the rise in copper prices.

[Th]e local market this forenoon was as [dull a]s the dullest Saturday forenoon in [s]ummer. It was a calm, and although [a sl]ight decline occurred in Lake Copper the market for metal shares as a [whole] had underlying strength. Sentiment [m]uch perplexed as to the immediate [futur]e. The course of prices for copper [stoc]ks will depend upon the New York [ma]rket to a large extent, and fluctuations at that centre will be influenced by the [ac]tion that Steel Corporation directors [take on] the dividend question this Tues[day].

Regarding Copper.

[Ho]mpson, Towle & Co. in their issues [s]hows from a prominent copper man [that the pro]duction of copper is figured all the way [equal] to consumption to 400,000,000 pounds [in ex]cess of consumption. The American production [o]f copper for the first quarter of 1910 was [illegible],000, and for the first quarter of 1909 [illegible],000, a gain of but 16,000,000 [illegible]. [Deliveri]es for the first quarter of 1909 were [illegible], and for the same quarter of 1910 [illegible], an increase in deliveries of 94,000,000. I don't see anything very bearish in the situation from these figures, and so far as consumption, which is at the highest [in] the world's history, is keeping pretty [close] to production, and the first thing we know we will have a big demand for copper for the electrification of steam roads, although at the moment the demand for copper wire bars is comparatively small. I remember when the street railways began to electrify; one after another started experimentally the work of electrification, and all at once a demand for electrification came from all parts of the country. The same with the railroads. The Pennsylvania, New Haven, St. Paul and New York Central have all demonstrated the success of electricity as against steam, and the public is already demanding the extension of electrification. This work may seem slow at first, but when it comes it will come in a hurry."

SPECULATORS' FIT OF BLUES CAUSE SLUMP

By BOERSIANER.

CHICAGO, April [illegible].—Were the stock market to be eliminated from the week's doings the financial recorder would have nothing of a disquieting nature to record. The share list, however, made an impression upon the impressionable, upon the volatile, tensional, nervous, hare-footed and mercurial-minded people who are of that list.

Declines in Bourse values infallibly lower the value of everything in the universe in the estimation of the Boursier, they gave a sombre hue to politics; they cast doubt on the prosperity that to the general public is visible and palpable.

The course of the [ma]rket in the past week had prompted the most careful and tactful of brokers to adopt the renaissance method of conveying unfavorable opinions without stating them. Others, the mass of brokers, having no care or need of diplomacy, became outspokenly bearish.

And the root reason of the unfavorable change is that the market declined. Brokers may protest, they may urge that the Congressional election in New York is [illegible], that the foreign trade report for nine months spells [illegible] poverty for the United States, that the views of iron trade journals are foreboding, that the rubber craze in England is on the point of exploding, an explosion that will shake American financiers, etc., etc.

But a [illegible] analysis will prove that these are superficial ex[cuses] for the fit of blues into which stock exchange men have fallen. The true and only explanation is the quotationboard, though it is not acknowledged.

[Ther]e is nothing organically wrong. A small wave of liquidation from London and from [illegible] of Steel common stock made a big wave of short selling and together these waves created a wave of pessimism.

The infection has infected some New York banks, not all [illegible]. In New York the disease is discussed, but not feared as yet. There is no [illegible] of contamination so far as can be seen at present. The only sinister [illegible] is the charge of apprehensive New York bankers that the heavy [illegible] in loans in the last two months has been due to wild land speculation in the West. Taken generally this is untrue.

State Association.

Representatives of some 80 trust companies met at the Old Colony Trust Co. last week for the purpose of forming a State trust company association on the same lines as the New York Trust Co. Association. By-laws were adopted, and there will be another meeting for permanent organization Thursday, April 28, when officers will be elected.

A POLITICAL MARKET

Wall Street has at last had to recognize the existence of the Federal Government at Washington, and professes to see in the retirement of Senators Aldrich and Hale the disintegration of the national Republican machine.

It means for us in Boston, both investors and brokers, that there is afforded one last and final opportunity for buying good stocks at the lowest prices to be made in the year 1910. The advance will be led by the precious metal and copper stocks and will gradually develop into a

BIG BULL MARKET.

While there is yet time, we urge investors generally to investigate the merits of such stocks as

Goldfield Consolidated	Ohio Copper.	Ely Central.
Chino Copper.	Nipissing.	Champion.
First National.	Rawhide Coalition.	Granby.
	Boston-Colorado.

We are prepared to furnish special advisory reports on each of the above mentioned issues and believe we can point a way in which to double your money in the movement that is about to start.

Our weekly "Money Maker," just out, contains our opinion on these stocks as well as some pertinent facts regarding Rawhide Mining, Colorado Copper, Florence Goldfield, North Butte, Cobalt Central, etc. It is sent free to any address, and if you have a dollar invested anywhere, is well worth asking for.

Contains a plain statement of facts, calls a spade a spade and is a [pro]spector of the truth. Send for it.

By MARY T. MEYER

Fifteenth of a Series of Articles Written Specially for the Sunday American. Another of Which Will Be Published Next Sunday.

(Copyright, 1910, by Mary T. Meyer.)

The year 1905 was quite a stormy one politically. We had politics all year; in fact, so far as the Mayoralty situation was concerned, we had it for two years—thanks to John F. Fitzgerald.

It was common talk that Fitzgerald would be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Mayor. It was also rumored (and that rumor had the support of only reliable persons) that Lomasney would support Fitz. Of course, I do not know what private and confidential Fitz and Lomasney had but I do know that Fitz was telling everybody that Martin was with him, and I also know that Martin didn't deny it.

Fitz was a tackling every social function that was held, of course, Fitz never failed to be the ordinary boundaries of physical endurance. The [illegible] dance, smoke-talk or anything that was not graced with Fitz's presence, did not attend by his wife, either speaking or singing. In his billboard ads for two years he combined both his avocations—publisher and candidate for Mayor. There was nothing he did however, that escaped the notice of the organization.

Donovan, Corbett, Billy Fitzgerald and Pat Kennedy were getting quite [illegible] was over the situation because Collins would not consent to be a candidate for re-nomination. Something must be done. The only prop Fitz had for his candidacy was the reported support of Lomasney. It would be a very good idea to take that prop from under him and let go smash

Noble Womanhood—The Light of the World.

The Light That in All Ages Has Guided Man Toward the Haven of True Happiness.

Copyright 1910, by the Sunday American Journal Examiner

S long as there are good, noble women in the world the world can not go far wrong. The mother, with her children about her; the young girl for whose sake her lover is trying to make a name for himself, these are influences for good more powerful than all the books ever written and all the sermons ever preached.

A man has to learn the difference between right and wrong, and it is the exceptional man who learns the difference readily or remembers it long. A woman knows it by instinct. She knows what is right for herself. Equally well she knows what is right for her husband, or her brother, or her son.

And the man whose moral guide is his mother, or his wife, or the girl he means to make his wife, is pretty safe from his worst enemy, which is himself.

Just now there are a good many shameful stories of graft under investigation. Two men have lately resigned from the New York Legislature—resigned under fire. The lawyer who had ably and eloquently defended one of them before the Senate investigating committee of the whole, begged tearfully that his client be spared the shame of conviction—because of his mother.

He pictured the sorrow of the mother on the home-coming of a disgraced son. He pleaded that she had always believed him a great and good man, and that the revelation of his guilt, or a public declaration of it, would break her heart.

Because of that trusting mother it is unfortunate that the investigation had to proceed; but nothing could better illustrate the purpose of this editorial than the very plea made by the lawyer for the defense.

If the gentleman who has now retired to his home, never again to figure in public life, had been half as considerate of his mother in his early life as was his lawyer in the time of his trouble, there would have been no scandal, no investigation, no exposure.

No man, acting on his mother's advice, making her his confidant, and benefiting by her judgment of right and wrong, could ever come near enough to graft to be tainted by it.

Ambitious as is every mother for her children, not one would ever counsel him to do wrong, or ever consent to his gaining any place, however great, through trickery or scoundrelism.

And a great deal of eloquence that now pours forth before investigating committees and juries and judges in behalf of the mothers of wrongdoers, would be spared if the mothers in question had been heeded by their erring sons.

It has been said, and with much truth, that most successful men advise with their wives about their business. A wife has as much interest in the success of her husband as he has himself, often more; for it is she who continually thinks of the future of the children. She dreams of a great future for them, and she wants it untainted. The man who is revolving schemes in his head which are of questionable honesty may talk of them to other men associated in business with him. He will never speak of them to his wife.

The worst of men will make their homes sanctuaries, where no evil can enter. In theory, at least, they are all for its defense. And if crooked dealings and rascality at last find them out, and bring shame and sorrow upon their innocent dependents, it is their own fault, never that of their wives.

The love and reverence for a woman has made a hero of many a man who, lacking them, might have been little better than a brute.

The brains of many a woman has directed the man she loved in the way he should go, saved him from the snares and pitfalls that have beset him, and given him an honorable and useful career.

In his greatest play, Mr. J. M. Barrie, one of the keenest and most thoughtful of writers, shows how much a woman can do for a man without ever letting him know that she is doing it.

Suspecting all the while that it is his own brains and his own character that are bringing about his rise, the man in the play puffs up with his own importance and despises the mind that in reality does his thinking for him. In the end he learns the truth and has the grace to be ashamed of himself.

Mr. Barrie has not created this situation. He has merely studied men and women—studied them intelligently—and put upon the stage a phase of life which can be found in thousands of homes throughout the civilized world.

If you could know the intimate history of the public men you admire, the writers whose books you read with delight, the composers whose great music inspires you, you would discover in most instances that a woman had found genius where none other could see it, and had been the means of bringing it before the world.

Barrie, who has done the world a great service in the writing of this play, was himself sustained and uplifted by his mother at a time when he was almost persuaded to abandon writing and take up some other calling.

For years he had worked as hard as he knew how learning to write things that the world would want to read. That is really the important thing in writing. For no matter how great the ideas in a man's mind, how noble the thoughts or how useful to the world, if they cannot be expressed attractively they might as well never be written.

Reading Stevenson, whom he greatly admired, Barrie one day gave way to despair. It seemed to him that no matter how hard he worked, how much patience he gave to his continuous practise in writing, he would never be able to approach the work of that most patient and persevering of all modern writers.

It was in this fit of despair that his mother found him. Kindly and cautiously she encouraged him, pretending that the Stevenson book was not nearly so well written as her son supposed, yet so interested in it herself that she slyly read it from cover to cover once she had picked it up. But by her faith in her boy she brought him new determination, and from the day that he found that she believed he would be one of the great writers of the times he tried to justify her hopes. The tributes that he has since paid her in his writings ought to be read by every man who has a purpose in life. For Barrie has sought to pay off a great debt to a noble woman. And were every man to do as much there would be a very sudden lessening of the evil and sorrow that surround us.

There is far too little of the spirit of chivalry in modern civilization; yet the fact that the world is not a general battle-ground for warring ruffians proves that it still exists.

Look at the public on parade in a large city and you would think that reverence for women was a thing of the past like knighthood. But even the uncouth loafers who crowd women out of seats in the trolley cars are all in some way subject to woman's influence. And in the years to come, that influence will be gradually extended till rowdyism is abolished and women begin to get the deference that is their due.

If you have been enough interested in life to observe it, you have seen men who you never thought would amount to anything made into ambitious, purposeful citizens by the love of a woman.

You have seen village rowdies transformed into hard-working, persevering young men to gain a position that would enable them to ask a young woman to marry them.

Naturally, the knighthood that suddenly flowers in the bosom of a youth who discovers that he is in love does not flower long after marriage. But despite the fact that he gradually sinks from the estate of a knight champion of all the other sex, the influence that has saved him from himself still remains and gradually works toward making a better man of him.

What happens with the individual happens with the collection of individuals that we call a nation.

One woman's influence lifts one man to better ideals and to higher purposes. The influence of twenty million women does as much for twenty million men. The result is that the nation, instead of being a mere collection of greedy, selfish units, each fighting for his own advantage, is actuated by good motives and moves onward in its steady climb toward morality and honesty and unselfishness.

The cartoon on this page pictures the light that noble womanhood casts on the angry sea of Life. In the waves is a man tossed about and in peril of his life yet guided to the haven of happiness by the light that shines on the waters about him.

Throughout the world men fight and struggle and contend with all the strength that is in them against the trials and temptations of the world.

Some of them win and fight alone, but these are the exceptions. The majority of men need the faith and trust that only a wife can give. The average man needs to know that whatever the world may say or think there is one woman who knows whether he is doing the best he can, who sympathizes with him when he is in trouble, who tries to lead him in the right path, and who is unselfishly interested in whatever success he may get at the end of the battle.

The man who has a wife and children to protect fights the better and lives the better. The fact that he is ashamed to confess his petty meannesses to his wife shows that he regards her as his superior, whatever may be the sentiments that he boasts when among his male companions.

And as long as he is ashamed of the defects in his character there is hope that he will correct them. Eventually the example of a good wife or a good mother will straighten the crooked places in his character, and make it what it ought to be, provided he is the kind of man who is in reach of any influence, human or divine.

If he is not—if not even the love of a noble woman can save him for himself—there is little hope or little future for him on this planet.

The coward Adam, fallen from grace in the Garden of Eden, cried in defense of his fall: "The woman tempted me." There are still some millions of Adams in the world, each ready to throw the blame of his downfall on the nearest Eve. But in spite of that, the influence of the misrepresented Eves continues to be good, and, through it, the Adams are roused from the condition of brutes and given real ideals and aspirations.

That influence is the light [illegible] as it is constituted to-day. Without [illegible] men would be about as civilized [illegible] as a pack of lawless, rapacious [illegible].

DYING—a $250,000 Pearl Necklace.

Paris, April 12

THE wonderful pearl necklace which belonged to Mme Thiers, wife of the distinguished French diplomat, and which was left to the French nation by her and placed in the Louvre, is dying from the mysterious, obscure disease which attacks these gems. The necklace is composed of three strands, made up of one hundred and fifty of the finest pearls ever brought up from the depths. When Mme Thiers gave the necklace to the French people it was worth a quarter of a million dollars. There are few jewelers who would give $5000 for it now, so far has the malady progressed.

Experts are at a loss to explain just what it is that makes pearls sicken and die. Apparently it is a form of starvation. It seems as though the gem feeds upon the life in the delicate skin of fair women. That is why, jewelers say, pearls should always be worn next to the flesh.

By the terms of Mme Thiers' gift, her necklace cannot be taken from its case in the Louvre. If it could be loaned to some woman the French Government could tell the experts believe that the majority of the pearls would recover. But it is impossible, and so the necklace is to die. Day by day the pearls are darkening, becoming ugly, old and withered.

The ruin of pearls has been known for ages to the Orientals' minds of the East. It is only recently that the West has come to recognize the phenomenon exists. There are some women who cannot wear pearls because whatever oil is about women to which pearls are sensitive is inimical to the gems.

For the same reason there are women who cannot wear turquoises. The most brilliant blue turquoise will speedily turn a dark and soapy green. There are some women on whom an opal will sparkle with all the beauty of its fettered fires, and the very same opal upon another woman will be lifeless as a piece of clay.

The great jewelers of the Old World and of New York now recognize this peculiarity and keep in reserve women upon whom the pearl thrives. Some great duchess or some great society star will find that her pearls are becoming lustreless and will take them to her jeweler and for one or two months one of the favorite women will wear next her skin many thousands of dollars worth of gems, and then the pearls are returned shining pink with life and perfect once again.

Pearls are also often rejuvenated by being sunk in sea water. Queen Alexandra of England is passion-

"Why I Left Society to be a Gypsy Queen."

The Romance of the Much Ancestored Baltimore Belle—Great-Great Grand Niece of the Man Who Wrote the "Star Spangled Banner"—Who Fled from the "Corseted Life" to the Free, Ungirdled Open Trail

Queen Jessie Michele, Who, as Miss Jessie Habersham, a Baltimore Belle, Ran Away from Society to Take the Open Trail.

JESSIE HABERSHAM, daughter of one of the old [illegible] families, has revolted [illegible] six years ago, and [illegible] that instead of being in a convent, as was supposed, she is a Queen of the gypsies, as found happiness in the [illegible]. Within the last year she is the wife of King Louis Michele, famous dancer of the Romanys.

The amazing fact is that Queen Jessie's friends are her devotees and the fact that she took the course she did instead of becoming a brilliant social [illegible] is [illegible] by them.

Queen Jessie to-day is a great grandniece of Francis Scott Key, who wrote "The Star Spangled Banner." She is a granddaughter of Mrs. Julia Lloyd Key, one of the most famous beauties of the Civil War era, and a descendant of [illegible] Habersham, who was [illegible] Navy.

Her father, Wyllys Habersham, is a member of the New York Yacht Club, and [illegible] Commander Habersham, of the United States Navy, [illegible] an H. arrived with [illegible] several others [illegible] called through [illegible] said to me, 'Why, [illegible] hope I'll [illegible] some relation [illegible] and [illegible] this is a good place to explain [illegible]

[illegible] shrugging dismissal to the subject. Miss Habersham's disappearance, six years ago, is appalled now at the discovery.

"She always complained that she hated society, but this is dreadful. Don't you think her father ought to take steps, see a dentist or something?"

But A. W. Habersham, descendant, like his daughter, of the long line of jurists, authors and soldiers, answers: "Jessie always yearned for freedom. She has all the wanderlust since she was a [illegible] she tells me she is happy [illegible] been a long struggle for me to know what is the best thing to do about her. I see now, after many years, it is better to let her follow her own destiny. Everyone in the world has the right to be happy, and we must follow our fate whatever it may be. My daughter is leading hers."

From her camp in the woods along the banks of the Missouri, two miles out of St. Louis, the rediscovered Queen Jessie has given to this newspaper her story of why she left society to become a gypsy and why she prefers the wild life of the woods to that of the drawing room.

By Jessie Habersham Michele.

I HAVE told my story and satisfied [illegible] Why have other people seen fit to say that?

I am sorry for those poor, corseted, simpering, weak-eyed creatures—society women.

I am sorry for them because they work hard at nothing. They are poor slaves in a petty kingdom. They are drudges, yet their work counts for nothing.

Their lives are like their bodies; corseted beyond comfort or proper freedom. They lead the corseted life.

I live in a pretty and comfortable little camp. My home is an orange and vermilion striped caravan wagon. I am happy in it, and I was miserable in my father's handsome home in a fashionable part of Baltimore. My little caravan has curtains of Oriental stripes. I made them myself. The ground is covered with Japanese matting and with rugs of beautiful design. The stools are covered to match. My sign is blue and gold. Those colors appear on my tent and on the gypsy queen's wagon.

Better than any yacht or private car is that flaunting queen's wagon. I love it for the comfort of its slow, creaking way along country roads. There is no nervous strain of the Twentieth Century express in this sort of travel. And if we choose to stop in some particularly shady spot in the deep woods we stop, and perhaps we stay for days. Perhaps all Summer. There is no mad rush from one station to another in gypsy travel.

My husband is a king. True. Jorgas Michele is only a gypsy king, but he is nevertheless a ruler. Hundreds obey him, and he cringes to no one, not even to me. Had I married in my old set, in my old life, I might have been the wife of a haggard-eyed clubman whom I occasionally met at mealtime—a man who was afraid of other men, especially of their opinion. My mate is a splendid fellow, with a red glow in his cheeks and the light of the sunshine in his eyes and fear of no man in his heart.

He never leaves me. We walk together, drive together, cook our meals together in a kettle over a brush fire. He builds and feeds the fire, and I cook. We hunt and fish together. We are never separated. That is the safeguard of marriage—a safeguard that no society woman has.

The society life, especially the society married life, is complex, and those who live it are unhappy. The gypsy life is simple and the gypsy is happy. That seems to be the answer to all the questions which winters to our camp ask me.

Of late there have been a number of secessions from the academic, or classical, ideal. Some of the expressions of the revolt are seen on these pages. The secessionists look upon the Old Masters as "photographers" and define True Art as the interpretation of a sensation called forth by a thing, and not the delineation of the thing that calls forth the sensation. This is an age-old and cosmic difference in thought. Do we resent the mosquito that bites or do we resent the bite the mosquito inflicts?

The first impression that a Philistine gets on looking at a secession picture is that the artist does not know how to paint, that he is in the mental state of a child who draws with a piece of coal. BUT if Art is so hard to define what is the use of paying millions for it? Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan will tear off a check for a couple of hundred thousand dollars for a picture, but he would not pay that for a painting were a photograph obtainable, as it would be worth not more than $4.68. What is the difference between the quarter million and the $4.68 does Art?

Here we have found a number of interesting facts and opinions upon the modern viewpoint of Art. As it has been through the ages, so it is now—the reader must decide for himself what Art really is.

This Franz Hals Portrait Sold for $125,000 in London. One Like It Sold for $137,000 at the Yerkes Auction in New York. If It Were a Photograph, as the Secessionists Say, It Would Be Worth Only $4.68.

My Secrets of Beauty.

No. 69—The Collarless Gown Requires a Pretty Neck—

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty.

"Stand before an open window and with the arms clasped behind you, let the head hang as far back as possible without moving the body."

"The first care must be to whiten the neck. To do this have recourse to the complexion brush with a small handle."

MADAME LINA CAVALIERI, who is the world's most famous living beauty, writes to-day upon how to acquire the kind of neck that can wear the collarless gown. Collars at all times are rather bad, Mme. Cavalieri thinks, but in Summer time they are abominations. What shall a woman do then, to make her neck pretty so that she may becomingly go without them? Mme. Cavalieri, besides her advice, gives also some of her best formulae.

Next week Mme. Cavalieri's topic will be "Dancing as a Developer of Beauty." It will be strikingly and instructively illustrated.

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

THE collarless gown requires that the neck be white and shapely—that is, well proportioned. To illustrate: The woman with an oblong face has as a rule abundant hair, definitely marked shoulders and a slight bosom, and long, slender limbs. With such a physique a neck should be long, slender and delicate. The woman with a round face has usually hair of slighter constitution, rounded shoulders, a full bust and large but tapering limbs. This woman has a short, plump neck. Were the necks of these women exchanged, the characteristic beauty of each woman would be marred.

The slight, tapering, rather fat neck is the index of the motive or active temperament. The round, plump neck is the symbol of the vital temperament. They are part of the physiques that have been described, and the too marked thinning of the neck of the vital woman and the plumpening of the neck of the woman of the motive temperament would subtract much from their beauty.

Every woman should try to make her neck fit her personality. Two essentials alone are necessary for both. The skin must be white. The flesh must be firm.

The task of making it white after a Winter of high, torturing collars of dark velvet and silk, of colored nets and irritant gold and silver lace is a hard one. It requires persistence and faith and hope.

The first step in preparing to wear a low collar is to wear the low collar. For so long as the high collar is worn the neck will be more or less stained, and angered by its unnatural treatment. To wear the low collar is to release the neck from its fetters, and give the muscles a chance to grow firm once more.

The first care must be to whiten the neck. To do this have recourse to the complexion brush with a small handle, so that every part of the neck can be reached. In the bot of the vital temperament They are with cast-iron soap, and into which a dozen drops of perfumed ammonia have been sprinkled, dip this brush and scrub with a soft but firm rotary motion, an upward one rubbing outward toward the point of the chin.

Or scrubbing may be done with hot water into which ten drops of benzoin have been sprinkled. With this benzinated water a mild soap or a paste made of oatmeal, dampened with the water, may be used. In either case rinse the neck well with cool water to remove the soap or paste and prevent their clogging the pores, also to make the muscles firm.

Lemon Juice, 3 oz
Or
Rosewater, 2 oz.
Benzoin, 10 drops.

An old fashioned remedy that is effective but should not be applied more than once or twice except in extreme cases because it is so strong that, too freely used, it would idea instead of whiten the skin, is this:

Fresh Horseradish root, 1 oz
Buttermilk, 1 pint.
Or
Horseradish root, 1 oz.
Vinegar, 2 fluid ozs.

Grate the horseradish and keep it for four hours in the milk or vinegar.

Binding slices of cucumber on the neck after a few applications. Slices of lemon will have the same effect, though they are less desirable than the cucumber, because the lemon juice will in time draw the skin, while the cucumber juice is soothing.

A cucumber cold cream can be applied nightly and in those times during the day when you may become invisible to the world. Rub gently into the neck, extending the massage to the collar bones and to the point of the chin, the following.

Rectified spirits of wine, ½ gill
Spermaceti, ½ oz.

To develop the muscles to a normal plumpness, promote the circulation by this exercise: Flatten the thumbs at the side and base of the neck. Interlace the fingers, so standing the head. Stand perfectly erect, the right foot considerably in front of the left, the knees straight. Moving the body only from the upper half—that is, above the waist line—move the head as far to the left as possible, bending it slowly until you can distinctly feel the strain upon the muscles of the neck. Without removing the hands move the head as far to the right as you did to the left. Then move it back as far as possible. Five minutes of these exercises, three times a day, will strengthen and develop the neck in a few months.

A less exhausting exercise consists simply of advice and a caution. Try to make your head reach your collar band at the back. Never follow the fashion of the time that seeks always to draw its head into its shell.

A lovely neck owes its beauty chiefly to the poise of the head. Hold your head high and you will have a full, graceful neck. The chief neck. For a full, graceful neck is the result of a full, graceful head. Any action that tends to draw the head forward is a direct action of blood to the face. The skin of such a neck never becomes sallow except for two reasons. Either a collar stains it yellow, or the sun tans it to an ugly, coarse shade.

Another all the development of the neck is to pass the tips of the fingers so that they will rest on the upper part of the breast bone. Oil less into cold cream or almond or cocoanut oil and massage lightly upward in a rotary motion to the neck from the breast bone to the chin.

To develop the neck, stand before an open window, and with the arms clasped behind you or hanging loose at the sides, let the head hang as far back as possible without moving the body. Turn it to the right in the same way with the chin well up, and to the left, keeping the chin pointed as high as possible.

Occasionally, not often, there are unsightly hairs on an otherwise beautiful neck. A paste made of one of the depilatory powders and kept on the hairy surface until it begins to burn, when it is removed and a little cold cream is applied, will remove temporarily the disfigurement. For permanent removal I recommend the use of an electric needle by a physician or surgeon.

Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

Lanoline, 1 oz.
Any perfume desired, 5 to 10 drops.
To remove tan and sunburn this has been [illegible] successfully used

To remove tan and sunburn this has been [illegible] successfully used

[illegible] have been ill and my hair is growing [illegible] in patches. What shall I do? In vigorous scalp massage and a good hair tonic are, I should say, your chief hopes. Electrical treatment is excellent to tone the ill nourished scalp.

A Brooklyn correspondent says: "I am a young woman in the thirties, but the skin on my neck and face is soft and flabby. What shall I do to make it firm?"

Oil of almonds	10 drops
Oil of cacao	10 drops
Benzoic acid	1½ grains
Sweet almond oil	10 ozs.
White wax	1 oz.
Spermaceti	1 oz.
Virgin wax	½ oz.
Spermaceti	½ oz.
Sweet almond oil	2 ozs.
Cocoanut butter	2 ozs.

The same correspondent asks what may be done for scars on the chin made by pimples. It is a very severe light massage with olive oil or cold cream should gradually remove the scars. If the case is an aggravated one I would have a physician.

Spirits of rosemary	½ ounce
Glycerine	½ ounce
Juice of one lemon.
Alcohol	4 ounces

The first four ingredients should be well shaken. Then the alcohol should be degrees be added.

If the hair is falling badly use the preceding one night and the next rub well into the scalp a pomade made as follows:

Lanolin	1 ounce
Olive oil	1 ounce

From the same city comes a query: "Please tell me how I may bring back the hair that has been bleached to its original dark brown color." I would call notice to her slow process of losing the hair's original color by applying:

Rectified spirits	1 ounce
Oil of marjoram	32 drops
Old ale	½ pint

Little Feathered Policemen of the Air

THERE are policemen in the air as well as on the ground, policemen with feathers as well as with blue uniforms, for the bird world has its guardians of the peace, who have duties closely resembling those of the majestic arm of human law. They have no inebriated parties to escort to the lock-up, but they have to prevent and avenge assaults, fights, larcenies, burglaries and other offenses against the person and property of the citizens of the air.

Whenever you find a telegraph line or wire you find the most conspicuous of the feathered constables, the king bird, in proportion of about one bird to every two or three posts. He is dark in color, has a white breast, and, denied a swallow-tailed coat, makes up for an ordinary tail by wearing his badge of office—a white tip—at the end of his tail. For in the middle of his crown there lies a streak of orange.

Birds of prey dread the king bird, and even the bird eagle has to acknowledge the authority of this representative of the law.

When a king bird sees a hawk sitting on the occupies a dead bough on a post, or even a cow's back, but the latter seat has its disadvantages from the fact that the bird's claws tickle the quadruped, so that he is continually being obliged to [illegible] from place to avoid the [illegible] [illegible] tail, a state of things [illegible] consorting to a [illegible] [illegible] Hence our [illegible] [illegible] just the official [illegible] he requires, and the criminal [illegible] [illegible] singly.

The king bird gets his living like our fly-catcher, by the active pursuit of entomology, but as he is a much bigger bird he tackles larger game. Still, he is a small bird to take on himself the duties of a country which contains, probably, a larger and more varied assortment of animal rascality than any other portion of the earth's surface. His only qualifications for the post are unbounded pluck, a native dexterity in flight kept up by constant insect-catching, and a beak and claws which can make themselves felt to some purpose.

Therefore, all species feel his vigorous onslaughts, and experience the difficulty of retaliating on an opponent which they can no more catch than an elephant can a fox terrier. Neither do ground vermin, like the mongoose, escape his supervision; if he cannot actually fight them, he can overlook and report their movements and so [illegible] their deep-laid schemes. And wicked birds, who have a human joy in raiding another's nest, think twice before they assault the police bird's little home.

It is a curious thing that on the other side of the world we find just the same phenomenon, of a police officer among the birds. [illegible] bring to [illegible] one of the commonest birds in England is the king-crow, which plays just the same part that the king bird does among us. He is also a bird of the fly catcher type, but far smaller than our bird. He is black as coal in color and sports a forked tail of the most exaggerated and flashy type; in fact everybody knows him as "that black bird with the fish tail that sits on telegraph wires."

These two birds are the most noted of the policemen of the bird world, for their habits and appearance are such as to bring them into everybody's notice; but, as a matter of fact, you may find the police bird in every country in one form or another, though compared to the king bird he is rather to be compared to a special constable in plain clothes than to a regular officer. Such a bird is the missel thrush, which is well known as an inveterate enemy of the crow and hawk kind and most reckless in his attacks on them. Unfortunately, however, he is far from being a public-spirited character on the whole, for in Winter he takes advantage of his superior strength to keep the best berry bushes for himself, and in Spring he is not guiltless of raids on his neighbors' preserves, so that the price our birds have to pay for policed protection is rather a heavy one in this case.

What it is that makes certain birds assume the functions of a knight-errant is hard to say. Of course, they gain something by making themselves respected, but in the case of many of the bird world, but no one could believe they deliberately take themselves out to acquire such prestige, or that they have a public-spirited desire to keep bad characters in check. Some of a naturally courageous disposition, they treat the criminal classes as either birds would like to treat their enemies if they dared—white, of course, the fact that [illegible] [illegible] strong and clever fibers must be taken into account.

It must be remembered, however, that even the [illegible] a sense of justice in [illegible] and as [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
